

Switzler Quits 5,000 Committee Due to "Business"

Split Over Issue of Municipal Ownership Believed by Some to Be Cause of Resignation.

R. M. Switzler, 4914 Davenport street, associated in the law business with his father, Warren Switzler, resigned yesterday from membership in the Committee of 5,000 which he has been prominently identified for a period of years.

Recently he has been serving on a special committee of that organization, with C. F. Harrison and F. D. Wead, in the work of selecting candidates who would subscribe to the principles of the Committee of 5,000.

In his formal resignation to Mr. Wead, president, Mr. Switzler states that "on account of pressure of business," he is unable to continue his membership. He made it plain that his resignation carries with it withdrawal from membership as well as a member of the special committee. Ordinary membership in the organization does not require the time of a member to fulfill his obligation.

Not in Sympathy.

It is generally known that "pressure of business" does not tell the full story of Mr. Switzler's resignation. As a member of the nominating committee it was necessary that Mr. Switzler should require candidates to be endorsed or considered for endorsement to subscribe to a municipal ownership principle, which expression Mr. Switzler does not believe should be required. He is not in sympathy with all of the plans of the Committee of 5,000. He believes the organization makes a pretence of one issue and an advancement of another, resulting in a "confusion of issues."

He further believes that the leaders of the organization are not consistent and his objection to the municipal ownership feature of their candidate requirement is on the grounds that the Committee of 5,000 has only one function and that is "good government."

Disagree on Issue.

In this connection it is pointed out that F. D. Wead, president of the Committee of 5,000, is also chairman of the Metropolitan Water board, and is a strong advocate of municipal ownership. Mr. Switzler and Mr. Wead do not agree on that issue.

Mr. Switzler insists he is just as much for good government as he has been. He is identified with the

Your Face and What It Tells

Should a Blonde Marry a Brunette Type?—"Coloring" Isn't a Dependable Guide to Characteristics, Says Analyst—Most Persons "Medium."

By MABEL WARNER RUGG.

Many writers on character analysis have attempted to show up coloring alone as an infallible index to character, but from many years of observation I know the distinct fallacy of this attempt.

Aggressiveness, enthusiasm, optimism, general "pep" are qualities these writers attribute to blondes, but I have analyzed many a blonde who did not express any of these. Brunettes are supposed to be given to thoughtfulness, studiousness, serious outlook on life, inclination to worry and steadfastness. Yet you can pick from your own acquaintances brunettes who do not show these characteristics at all.

There are, though, a few things we can express as rather dependable from color indications alone. Extremes in coloring nearly always denote extremes in temperament. The extreme blonde must guard against extremes both of optimism and pessimism. The extreme brunette must watch against negative moods of pessimism and lack of self-confidence.

Blondes Like Variety.

The blonde loves variety, both in work and play. This is probably the reason blondes are accused of fickleness. Blondes as a rule, also, are practical and commercial, while

Mrs. Minnie Dorward Gets Divorce and $175 Alimony

Alimony of $175 a month was awarded to Mrs. Minnie Dorward in a decree of divorce granted her yesterday from Joseph J. Dorward, manager of the Belt Auto Indemnity association. She charged him with cruelty.

Mrs. Dorward was given custody of their four children. She was also given the income from extensive property owned by Dorward in Waverly Place addition. She says he has an income of $400 a month.

the brunette does not require so much activity, and is inclined to do the serious, mental work of the world.

An examination of the pictures of philosophers, leaders in religious thought and musical composers shows a predominance of brunette coloring.

What "Color" to Marry?

Lay aside right now any belief in the old superstition that an extreme blonde should marry an extreme brunette. Medium complexion tends to an even balance in temperament. So, if you are inclined to "moods," it is better to associate closely with a person who is balanced, who has neither extreme of pessimism nor optimism.

When you make your observations of people for coloring, be sure you know what really is a blonde and what a brunette. If you may have brown eyes and very light brown hair, you are medium, the brown eyes offsetting the light hair. Be your eyes ever so light blue, if your hair is dark, then you are medium. Dark skin coloring, too, offsets lightness both of hair and eyes, and vice versa.

General Denial Made by Cahow In Divorce Suit

Commission Man Declares Allegations Contained in Petition Regarding Habits and Income Untrue.

Ernest Cahow, vice president of the Great Western Commission company, in an answer filed in district court yesterday to the second amended petition of his former wife, Gertrude Cahow, 5001 Underwood avenue, denies her allegation that he was ever "living in luxury and affluence with another woman and her children" and also denies that he was supporting another woman at the time his wife secured a divorce from him, June 1, 1917.

Mrs. Cahow, in her second amended petition filed two weeks ago, alleged that her husband told the court at the time of the divorce that he had an income of $350 a month. The court granted her $150 a month alimony. She alleges his income was $750 a month and that he now has an income of $30,000 a year.

All this she denies. She asked the court to change the divorce decree so as to give her $20,000 in a lump and also $500 a month in addition.

Cahow, in his answer, asks the court to give him custody of their youngest child, a boy of 14. He says the child has reached an age where a father's companionship will be more beneficial to him than a mother's.

The Cahows were married in 1892 and have three children, two of them past 21 years of age.

Omaha Firm Charges Discrimination in Display of Goods at Schools.

Alleging discrimination shown against its goods in the display of sample "stocks" in the play stores in 40 Omaha public schools, a local grocery firm complained to the Board of Education.

The subject was discussed at a meeting of the board, the outcome being that this chain of stores will be supervised hereafter directly from the office of John H. Beveridge, superintendent.

Some of the school board members were for closing the stores entirely, but a majority believed it would be harsh to deprive the children of the pleasure and instruction they are deriving from this school feature.
