

Reavis Measure Bitterly Opposed By Job Holders

Propaganda Against Reorganization of Governmental Departments Launched by Payroll Beneficiaries.

Undertaking to save public money by the enforcement of economy in government administration has its drawbacks, according to Congressman C. F. Reavis of the First Nebraska district, who was in Omaha yesterday, en route from Washington to his home at Falls City.

Mr. Reavis is author of a bill passed by congress, establishing a joint congressional committee to reorganize executive departments of the government, eliminating duplication and curtailing waste. Such a re-organization, he believes, will save the public not less than $1,000,000 a day, yet before the investigation is fairly under way, congressmen are receiving letters from all over the country, opposing it.

Reason Is Apparent. "The reason is easy to understand and the facts are known," said Mr. Reavis. "Governmental departments, at least the bureaus, which continue from administration to administration, do not want to be cut off the payroll. Many of these have activities reaching into the various states, with subordinates in contact with many people. These bureaus are encouraging propaganda against our investigation."

People who are asked to write such letters should reflect that not since the days of Alexander Hamilton have the executive departments been subjected to a thorough re-organization. There is a great job to be done, and for the public good entirely. It was attempted under Roosevelt's administration and again under Taft's. Each time the departments managed to block it. We don't want that to happen again.

Favored by President. "President Harding is for the re-organization. Every one of his cabinet officers is for it, particularly Mr. Hoover, secretary of commerce. Every one of them has promised us full co-operation. There are 27 federal bureaus building good roads over the country. There are 22 bureaus interested in hydraulic engineering. There were 16 cook books issued by the government last year, all covering the same field, issued simply because different departments were duplicating each other's work. I honestly believe that if duplication were eliminated throughout the various departments, the government would save $1,000,000 a day, a sum equal in a year to the entire cost of the Panama canal."

Harding Is Complimented On His Choice of Physician. Resolutions adopted by the Homeopathic and Eclectic Medical Associations of Nebraska congratulating President Harding on the appointment of Dr. Charles E. Sawyer of Marion, O., as his personal physician for the administration, have been sent to the president. Dr. Sawyer and Dean Irving S. Cutter of the medical college of the Nebraska State university.

The resolutions "recognize Dr. Sawyer as one of the great homeopathic physicians of the world," and consider his appointment not only as a deserved honor for himself, but also an honor for the American Institute of Homeopathy, of which he is a past president.

The resolutions were signed by the legislative committee of the Nebraska associations, the members of which committee are F. L. Wilmett, F. B. Finney, John F. Spearman, E. Arthur Carr, F. M. Andrus and H. B. Cummins.
