Harding on the Chimese relief question:

At this, the earliest practicable moment of my administration, I desire to add my own to the many appeals which have been issued heretofore in behalf of the starving people of a large section of China.

I am informed that the American committee and the church and other organizations co-operating with it, have already remitted several million dellars to the American and international relief committees in China, and that already a great relief work has been accomplished. Nevertheless, my information is that the means thus far placed at the command of these organizations are entirely inadequate to the task they confront. Since the beginning of this relief movement a much more accurate understanding of the grave situations has become possible. The Department of State has from time to time made public information received through its representatives in China as to the conditions prevailing there. The picture of China's distress is so tragic that I ammoved therefore to remew the appeals heretofore made, and to express the hope that the American people will continue to contribute to this humanitarian cause as generously as they possibly can.

The cry for succor comes, to us from a people far distant, but linked to us by manifold ties of friendly association, confidence and good will. The American nation has never failed to demonstrate its friendship for the people of China and that friendship has always been reciprocated in a manner which I feel justified the hope that in this hour of China's great distress our people will do everything in their power for its amelioration. there has been an increase of 5 per cent in cattle, 15 per cent in sheep today. and 24 per cent in hogs.
