Gouverneur Morris is writing a story for Goldwyn, which, for a time at least, will be known as "The Hangman."

Gloria Swanson, in Elinor Glyn's "The Great Moment," does a Russian dance that is said to be remarkably beautiful.

Gaylord Lloyd, younger brother of Harold, is engaging in the picture game by the way of one reel comedies.

That the elaborate performance of Singer's Midgets at the Orpheum this work is extremely popular is demonstrated by the extraordinary attendance. At each performance the theater is filled to its especially, with standing room at a premium. The act is presented by 50 wes been and women. In the offering there are not been an interest comes a musical enlieghle, then a strong man act, then a linear conjuring feature, then a hunt, with two deer and 15 hunting dogs. There are notobatic newboys, a fashion parade, a cloopatra spectacie, a performance of three trained elephants, a laughable boxing match and an engaging drill of midget residers. The unusual show is rounded out by six other pleasing acts.

Jean Paige, one of the most popular of the younger stars, has the principal role in the his special production. Black Beauty which is being shown at the Brandes theater this week. The film is unique in many respects and is filled with spec-troular access. The fox hunt, the fire in the stubles, the storm that washed the the stubles, the storm that washed the bridger away, the grand ballreom scene and the race between horse and locemotive are some of the big moments in the picture. A score of horses used in the production necessitated the maintenance of linelesmith shop, harness makers, carriage maker and a large number of grooms, stable boys and the like during the making of the film.
