Head Scissors And Wristlock Defeat Iowan

Wisner Athlete Wins First Fall In 20 Minutes and Second In 17—Kallio Beats O'Connor.

By RALPH WAGNER. Wisner, Neb., won over Manning, Ia., Wednesday night at the City auditorium when "Patty" McGill, this state's latest wrestling sensation, pinned the board shoulders of Joe Stangl to the canvass in two straight falls, the first tumble coming after 20 minutes of clever work and the final fall and match in 17 minutes. McGill downed his opponent by using a head scissors and wristlock.

McGill's victory was one of cunning rather than strength, for the Manning, Ia., grappler was considerably the bigger man, and was not without a considerable degree of skill. The matter of fact was that Stangl entered the roped arena weighing 194 1/2 pounds, while McGill tipped the beams at 179, just before entering the ring.

McGill Behind First. After 15 minutes of wrestling Stangl had already worked out of two head scissors and wristlocks and a little later the Iowan got caught in a couple of the same holds. McGill got a cheer out of his followers with a toehold that looked like curtains for the boy from across the Missouri, but the hold yielded nothing.

Stangl broke the toe hold and rolled his lighter opponent over, but the speedy McGill didn't permit Joe to remain in that position long and both men were soon on their feet belling around the ring. McGill made a grab for Stangl's leg and as quick as a flash the Wisner athlete got out from under, but in doing so "Pat" wrapped his legs around Joe's neck and at the same time secured a wristlock, pinning Stangl to the mat after 20 minutes of wrestling.

Wins in 17 Minutes. The second and final fall came after 17 minutes of wrestling when McGill secured a head scissors and wristlock on Stangl while the latter was attempting to roll over the Wisner boy so that he could get on top. It was the second time within the last three months that McGill dumped the Manning grappler. "Pat" first won over Stangl at Tekamah, Neb., in a handicap match. Joe was to throw the Wisner boy twice within an hour in order to win the match, while if McGill won a fall he was declared the winner of the encounter. Kallio Beats O'Connor. In the semi-windup Guss Kallio of Norfolk, Neb., won over Walter O'Connor of Carroll, Ia., in two straight falls with a head scissors and wristlock. Kallio won the first fall after 15 minutes of wrestling and the second and final tumble in six minutes and 30 seconds of work. "Doc" Taylor of Des Moines refereed both matches.

Will Curve 'Em Over for the Buffaloes

Paul Murray May Exchange Wallops With "Heap Big Injun Chief" Boxer

Paul Murray, Omaha boxer who has won himself proudly into the light heavyweight class, may go to Tulsa, Okla., soon to wing a few rights and lefts at Chief Big Bear, a flood-blooded Choctaw heavyweight, if terms of a tentative contract are agreed upon and signed. Murray received a letter yesterday from Harry Miller, sport promoter and one of the owners of 101 Ranch circus, requesting terms of a proposed 10-round bout.

To prove that knighthood and chivalry did not die when Walter Raleigh had his tonsils operated on with a guillotine, we have only to look up Gink Fowler's record in the Roughtown Blue Book. Gink won 46 straight fights when he was a bouncer in the Roughtown Day Nursery. After that he got a job as house detective in an orphan asylum and won 83 more victories. He was 29 years old at this time and was forced to concede 20 years to some of his younger opponents. He didn't look for the best of it when training for his battles and some of his sparring partners were the toughest guys in the Civil War Veterans' Home at Roughtown. You can consider the ruggedness and bulldog courage of Gink when he bizz you that one of his opponents was armed with two crutches. It was a terrific struggle for 20 rounds, and twice Gink was on the floor counting moonbeams. But his gameness won out and Gink won the battle from a man who actually has 60 years more experience than him. They used to claim that Gink's spine didn't draw the color line, and that it would fool any oleomargarine inspector, but Gink wasn't yellow. His ancestors were fighting folks. His uncle was the best board jumper in Ohio. His grandpop tamed a canary bird, and only wrung its neck after it was fullgrown and dangerous. Gink's most famous fight was for the championship of the Roughtown club of incorrigible juveniles. All of Roughtown's best citizens belonged to this stylish organization, and Gink was by card only. There was no exit. His opponent was Chuck Spazzums. Chuck had never been defeated at anything. He tried to learn to read and write in 1880 and still has a clean slate. Gink was paroled especially for this battle. The warden didn't have much confidence in Gink and Gink didn't believe in the warden. Gink went into the ring handcuffed, and invented the famous double punch. He swung both arms like a xylophone player and caught Spazzums on the chin with an armful of anvils. Some folks claimed that Chuck had been practically knocked out by the two flashlights taken before the fight. No doubt the New York News

WITH THE PUGS

Chicago Tribune-Omaha Bee leased wire. Chicago, March 24.—Benny Leonard has fully recovered from his attack of tonsillitis and is planning minor bouts. A bout for the flyweight championship of the United States, the prize money being $10,000, will be fought at New York, March 31. The title is held by Jersey City and Abe Goldstein of New York, two of the most popular little fellows at their weight in the world. Frankie Calhoun, on the other hand, is a contender today. Lew Tendler, lightweight contender, will submit to the amputation of the first joint of the third finger of his left hand and undergo an operation for the removal of a small bone in his right thumb this week. Tendler will not be able to box for four months. Lew injured his hands in the Fredrick fight. Jack Ellis, bantamweight of Milwaukee, who is making Chicago his home under the management of J. Miller, is anxious to box Jimmy Kelly, Babe Abner or any one in his division, including Champion Joe Lynch. Johnny Lewis, the submarine knocker, is still lying around idle, as they all seem to be sidestepping him. He is anxious to box Frankie Calhoun, Fredrick Schaffer or any of the junior lightweights.

Trade Riddled Boston Red Sox; Short of Championship Class This Coming Season—McInnis May Go

By JAMES CRUSBERRY. (Copyright, 1921, by The Chicago Tribune.) Hot Springs, Ark., March 24.—(Special.)—It doesn't seem possible for a one-time champion base ball team to have much of the championship punch left after disposing by sale and trade of such recognized stars as Babe Ruth, Carl Mays, Tris Speaker, Harry Hooper, Luffy Lewis, Jack Barry, Larry Gardner, Wallie Schang and Ernie Shore. Not long ago all those famous fellows were with the Boston Red Sox, and not long ago the Red Sox were world's champion. Now all of them are gone. If all were in the Red Sox camp today—even if one or two of them have passed their best days—the Red Sox undoubtedly would be favorites for the 1921 pennant.

As it is, Hughie Duffy, who has taken the job of leading the Red Sox, is hustling and struggling with a bunch of lesser lights, some of which haven't yet reported because of salary differences. Old Paprika Seems Lacking. Some already here are working in a manner that lacks spirit and confidence, and the general impression among the experts of the game is that the Red Sox are doomed to a second division berth. There are a few players of high standard still with the Boston outfit, and much depends upon the spirit those fellows display in the fight. Should they enter in the battle—as they may, because of the pleasing personality and ability of their manager—the Red Sox might have quite a strong crew on the field, with a bit of help from some bright-looking youngsters and a goodly portion of base ball luck.

Everett Scott, at short, is the best in the American league. Stuffy McInnis, who is booked for first base, Murray is boxing instructor of the North Side Athletic club. He has had 25 years experience in the ring. Among some of the noted boys that he has boxed are Jess Willard, Jack Johnson, Sam Langford, Billy Papke, Stanley Ketchel, and Joe Wolcott.
