

Train Crashes Into Automobile: Two Women Hurt

Car Upset and Demolished at 30th Street Crossing—Infant in Driver's Arms Uninjured.

Two women and a small baby narrowly escaped death yesterday afternoon at 2:30 when the automobile in which they were riding on the North Side, Mrs. Della Cunningham, 3722 North Twenty-eighth street, and Mrs. O. E. Evans, 2715 Madison street, were driving in the Cunningham coupe to Fort Omaha.

Mrs. Evans carried her baby daughter, Winnell, 3 months, in her arms.

They were going to the garrison to attend a weekly social.

Mrs. Cunningham was driving south on Thirtieth street.

Tram Hits Auto.

As the car ran up on the Missouri Pacific tracks at Boyd street a westbound freight train loomed and crashed into the machine.

Mrs. Cunningham snatched the baby from Mrs. Evans' arms as both women were hurled from their seats.

The car was knocked 10 feet across the street, turned turtle and demolished.

Mrs. Evans landed in the ditch beside the road, and Mrs. Cunningham fell near her.

The baby, nestled close in Mrs. Cunningham's arms, escaped without a scratch.

Women Injured.

Mrs. Cunningham suffered bruises about the body and lacerations of the scalp and face while on the wreck.

Mrs. Evans suffered bruises about the body and head.

Police surgeons were summoned and took the trio to the Evans home, where both women now lie in a state of nervous exhaustion.

Mrs. Evans may be suffering internal injuries, the surgeons said.

She could not discuss the wreck and Mrs. Cunningham talked brokenly of the accident.

Didn't See Train.

"I did not see the train, nor did I hear any signal, neither bell nor whistle," said Mrs. Cunningham.

"When I saw that engine loom up before us and felt the crash as it struck our car, my mind went blank."

Mrs. Evans was knocked semi-conscious, in which condition she is reported to be still lying.

The crew of the train included H. Reid, engineer; R. Bador, fireman; J. A. Ball, conductor; H. A. Jeffries and Rex Briest, brakemen.

None of them was injured.

Says Rang Bell.

Engineer Reid claims he rang the bell on the locomotive for the crossing.

"There's a steep grade there," said he, "and I had to put on a little more steam than usual to make the grade."

"I sounded the bell for the crossing."

The train was on the coupe before he could throw on the brakes, the engineer said, and the crash came instantly.

New Ordinance Cuts Home Light Rates

A 10 per cent cut in electric light rates for residences is proposed by an ordinance to be submitted by Commissioner Ure and W. C. Lambert, city corporation council. The cut is from 6 to 5 1/2 cents per kilowatt hour.

The new rate will reduce the cost to residence users by $103,000, but this sum will be distributed in boosts to wholesale consumers, the new plan contemplates. The return to the power company will be the same.

Two other reductions are considered, one of initial commercial lighting rates for the first block of 150 kilowatt hours, and second, for patrons of extra power, alternating current.

Home Superintendent May Be Made Juvenile Officer

Mrs. Margaret Sexton, superintendent of Riverview home, who will be displaced by Mr. and Mrs. George Cott in the position April 1, said yesterday she hopes to continue in work with delinquent and neglected children.

Strong efforts were made to keep Mrs. Sexton in her position. She is the widow of John L. Sexton, the superintendent, who died from wounds he received when he was shot one night last spring at Eighth and Bancroft streets when he sought to interfere with a man who was annoying a girl.

Rogerson has not yet decided to accept.

"I have my home here but if I sell it, I may accept Mr. Mantell's offer," he said.

Rogerson attracted public attention when he resigned as coach for the 1920 senior play rather than expurgate portions of Goldsmith's classic "The Vicar of Wakefield," as he was requested to do by Miss Jessie Towne, dean of girls at Central high school.

Warhooshee Must Pay Back $250 Fee

Warhooshee Arveano, Indian princess, soothsayer and herb healer, is out $250.

In fact, she's really out $500. So decreed Municipal Judge Baldwin yesterday afternoon.

Thomas Garup, 6805 South Thirtieth street, sued Warhooshee for $250 which he said he paid as half of a fee of $500 for the princess to cure his wife of attacks of epilepsy.

Garup charged Warhooshee did not effect a cure and sought to retrieve his $250 through the courts.

Judge Baldwin heard the case last Friday afternoon, at which time the Indian princess waxed stanch on the witness stand.

Then the judge took the case under advisement and yesterday decided in favor of Garup.

So Warhooshee must pay back that $250 to Garup and lose the other $250 she had figured on adding to her bank account which helps keep her trio of automobiles running.

Postal Agents Fail to Capture Mail Robbers

Reveal Loss of Pouch at Stuart, Neb., January 29—Loss is Estimated at Over $10,000.

O'Neill, Neb., March 30.—(Special Telegram.)—Four hundred dollars in incomplete national bank currency, consigned to the First National bank of Stuart, Neb., and many valuable papers, estimated at $10,000, were secured by mail pouch bandits in a robbery at Stuart, Neb., January 29, according to information just made public. Postal inspectors and secret service men still are at work around Stuart to apprehend the bandit or bandits.

The pouch of first-class mail, known as a catch pouch, was dropped off Northwestern passenger train No. 3 at the Stuart station after midnight and was stolen before the railway agent had time to pick it up. Its loss was discovered when abstracts, mortgages and other instruments involved in March settlements consigned from O'Neill, failed to reach their destination and when currency consigned to the Stuart bank from the Treasury department failed to arrive.

Postal inspectors discovered the pouch later a short distance from Stuart and the mail left in it was sent on to the addressees.

A $10-bill, soiled and mutilated so that the bank signature, if any, would be illegible, was cashed at the Stuart First National bank and was discovered to be one of the missing bills several days later. None since have been discovered. Banks have been notified to look out for the missing currency, described as follows: Eight full sheets of bills, three 10s and one 20 on each sheet, numbered from 2,550 to 2,557 inclusive. The 10s have a picture of McKinley and 20s of Hugh McCullough.

Indians Appeal to President to Name Sloane Commissioner

Washington, March 30.—(Special Telegram.)—Congressman Evans of Nebraska accompanied by Secretary Bishop of the Society of American Indians of which Thomas L. Sloane of Pender, Neb., is president, and several Indian members of the society, today saw President Harding in the interest of Mr. Sloane, who is a candidate for commissioner of Indian affairs. The president listened with close attention as Judge Evans outlined the claims Mr. Sloane had for the place, which were accentuated by Mr. Bishop.

While no promises were given it is known that the differences in the Oklahoma delegation over the place make it almost a certainty that no candidate from that state, and there are several, will land the job. While Mr. Sloane has strong endorsements, it is believed that ex-congressman Charles H. Burke of South Dakota, who has the united support of his delegation, will land the position.

The Nebraska delegation is divided between Mr. Sloane and Mr. Dornington, brother-in-law of Congressman Reavis.

Payment of Award to Madeline Nugent Fought

An effort to avoid payment of $25,000 damages from the estate of the late Robinson C. Martin to Madeline E. Nugent, 2033 North Twentieth street, was made in a technical objection filed in county court today by Joseph E. Martin, administrator of the estate.

Martin was killed and Miss Nugent was so badly injured that she has not yet recovered when an automobile driven by Martin collided head-on with a street car at Twenty-sixth and Leavenworth streets, June 20, 1920.

The technical objection to the damage claim of Miss Nugent holds that no claim for damages can hold against a man who is deceased. Martin's estate is said to be worth $100,000.
