Romance in Origin Of Superstitions

Horse-Chestnuts. in your pocket to cure or ward off rheumatism it only shows that you have not quite outgrown the treeworship of your ancestors. That trees were the abode of supernatura! beings, if not gods themselves, was a belief common to all our European progenitors, and the lingering remnants of it are frequently found in modern superstitions. It existed in such strength, even down to classical days, that ancient Jupiter of the Roman capitol was nothing more nor less than an oak tree.

In those old days certain trees were supposed to exert a benificent influence upon certain diseases. Thus the ash as a tree-god cured hernia and its leaves were a specific against DUPLEX press brick flat, walking distance, oak finish, income $1,200; price, the bite of scrpents. In some parts $9,500, Call days, Douglas 1734. of England today there is a custom of passing a child afflicted with congenital hernia through the growing ash in expectation of a cure; and there is a New England superstition | house: 25 miles east of Sioux City. there is a New England superstition Worth the money. Address Box K-17, that a snake will not crowl under an ash tree.

The chestnut tree god apparently specialized in rheumatism, for it was the true chestnut that was originally carried as a rheumatic antidote and, according to the American Fork-lore society, that custom is still "somewhat general in the United States. Therefore it is confidently asserted that the employee of the railroads nor the employers even who are chlefty concerned but it is the American public.

Mr. Warfield asserts that the gross revenues of the railroads of the country have been reduced to a point where there are not sufficient net earnings to meet fixed charges. He might have said, as it fact he really intimates, that if this condition continues amenting like universal bankruptcy awaits the railroads of the United States.

It can be Remedied.

Seek to Clear Up Railway Troubles

National Body of Security Holders Only Organization Representing the Public.

BY HOLLAND.

Six million individuals in th nited States are owners of securities of all kinds and particularly those which have been issued by railroad companies. That figure is the estimate of investment brokers and statisticians who have been with care securing reports upon which they could base their estimate of the total number of indiidual security holders. This inludes of course banks, insurance companies and corporations which have invested some part of their surplus in securities.

Another estimate which is assumed to be reasonably correct fixes the number in each of the railroads, of stockholders whose holdings are less than 100 shares as numbering in the aggregate much the larger When you carry a horse-chestnul part of those in the United States who hold securities. So also it has been discovered that approximately one-third of all who are in possession of securities of less than 100 shares are women.

Many Women. The Pennsylvania Railroad company, the New York Central and the New York New Haven and Hartford Railroad company have a arge number of women recorded in their books as owners of shares of these railroads, many of them owners of less than 100 shares apiece.

These figures make clear the vital interest which the public apart from the wage carners and the management of the railroad companies, is now making evident and must continue to make evident until the ratiway difficulties are eliminated. But the public is not represented by any association with one exception, or by any authoritative tody. It stands apart. The railroad wage samers are represented by their union organizations. The management of the railroads is represented by various associations. But the public which from one point of view is chiefly concerned about this matter is without any formal representation excepting the one of which S. Davies Warfield of Baltimore is preadent. This is known as the National Association of Owners of Hailroad Securities. This organization is already justifying its creation. It is taking active and nament part in the efforts which are now underway to secure satisfactory adjustment of the railroad Situation.

society, that custom is still "some what general in the United States."
But in New England and the middle west the horse-chestnut is the thing; probably because it is called a chestnut, looks like a chestnut—especially like the chestnut of southern Europe—and being larger than the true chestnut (Castanea), ought to be a more powerful appeal to the chestnut tree god.

It Can Be Remedled.

It Can Be Remedied.

Mr. Davies has been occupied for more than a year with a study of the railroad situation. He discovered early that the chief factor in this situation so far as the effect of it is concerned is the American public. Until this associaton was organized this public was without unified voice or any other than indirect influence. Now it is in the interest of the public and therefore of the country at large that an attempt will be made to put an end to the present weakness in the situation, which is due in part to the lack of co-ordination between the organization, which adjust rates which is the Interstate Commerce commission and the other organization which deals with wages, which is the United States Labor board.

Presumably the situation will be cleared in great measure from its present difficulties, if there be readjustment of rates, which will be satisfactory to shippers and to those who use the railroads for passenger service and if there also be coincidently readjustment of wages. In addition, Mr. Davies, Senator Cummins and others, are convinced that the management of the railroads must establish greater economics and this is believed to be practicable. Mr. Davies says that for the first time in American transportation history the railroads of the United States as a ticable. Mr. Davies says that for the tirst time in American transportation history the railroads of the United States as a whole are not earning the interest on the aggregate amount of their outstanding bonds. This is a danger which the railroad bendholders of the United States will, act-ing in concert and co-ordination, strive to bring speedily to an end, and Mr. Davies believe can bring to an end, because the believe can bring to an end, because the cause of these difficulties is not funda-
