

American Goods Lead Imports in Soviet Russia

One Freighter at Revel Has Just Unloaded 100,000 Pairs of Shoes, All of Which Were Made in U. S.

Reval, April 5.—(By The Associated Press.)—Despite the new trade agreement between Great Britain and Soviet Russia, the larger proportion of the extremely small amount of goods entering Russia through Esthonia continues to be of American origin.

One freighter in this port has just unloaded 100,000 pairs of American shoes and a quantity of leather for shipment into Russia, while another American steamer, similarly laden, has just arrived here. These deals were negotiated by the Robert Dollar concern some months ago.

Agricultural Implements.

Official statistics published by the Esthonian government show that only 15,569 tons of goods were in transit to Russia through Esthonia from Reval from January 1 to March 31, or about five or six average shiploads.

The shipments included 3,528 tons of agricultural machinery, 2,826 tons of textile and footwear, 1,458 tons of miscellaneous machinery, 620 tons of leather and 492 tons of drugs.

The docks at Reval are still congested with shipments of machinery, some of which are held up for lack of railway transport and others because of reported financial hitches after their arrival.

Get Coal of U. S.

No Russian goods were exported through Esthonia during the first three months of the present year.

The latest issue of Economic Life, published in Soviet Russia, says that in February Russia imported 1,401,250 pounds (about 25,271 tons) of all commodities, of which 1,261,000 pounds were coal from the United States going to Archangel and Murmansk. The exports it is stated, by the same publication, were only 132,575 pounds (about 2,386 tons) including lumber to England and flax to Latvia.

There recently has been a considerable decrease in the number of American and English tradesmen in Reval.

Colonel Hayward was a resident of Nebraska City for many years and was a leader in national guard activities and politics. He won fame in the world war as commander of the negro 15th regiment, New York.
