Kendallville, Ind., April 13.—Government bonds, stamps and negotiable papers valued at $50,000, comprise the loot obtained by robbers who robbed the Farmers' State bank at Albion, 12 miles west of here, early this morning, reports given out today showed, following a check by bank officials. Entrance to the bank was obtained by prying open a small window. Acetylene torches were used by bandits in burning their way through the vault and in the safety deposits boxes. Fear prevented tenants residing in the flat over the bank from sounding the alarm, it is stated. Night Marshal McFetters of the town knew nothing of the robbery until the cashier opened the bank for business.

Improvement Follows Warning of Daugherty To Building Industry

Washington, April 13.—Marked improvement in conditions in the building trades, Attorney General Daugherty said today, has been evidenced since his "modest but emphatic warning" of last week against illegal practices. There is an improvement everywhere, he declared. For the most part, he said, it would appear that the department was receiving the outside help it had asked for in remedying the evils of price-fixing and illegal combinations in the building industry. It would seem, he asserted, that the government could get along with the request that these practices be discontinued, although there might be some prosecutions and some civil suits.

Unification of Government Air Service Opposed

Postal Aviators to Be Made Part of Army Reserve Force, Secretary of War Announces.

Washington, April 13.—Unification of the aviation service of the government, concerning which there has been much agitation, was opposed by President Harding in his message to congress, the president taking the view that aviation is inseparable from either the army or the navy. There will be co-operation, however, between all the government departments concerned with aviation and in the development of commercial aviation. The president approved the report of the national advisory commission for aeronautics, recommending establishing of a bureau of aeronautics in the Department of Commerce for the regulation of air navigation and urged that this be given legislative approval. The air mail service, which the president described as an important part in the direction of commercial aviation, is to be consolidated into the military department of the government for emergency purposes. Secretary of War Weeks declared, following the presentation of the president's message, "As soon as we can do it," said the secretary of war, "all postal aviators will be placed in army reserve and in the event of an emergency they can be called into aviation service of the army."

Under this arrangement the training and preparation of postal aviators can be improved and they will be better prepared for the postal air service. Of course, while in the reserve they will be under postal jurisdiction. If called into emergency air service, the postal air mail would be necessarily cut out until the emergency passed.

The president was particularly emphatic in urging the development of commercial aviation outside the government, so that the government might be saved the experience of development and maintenance of an industry now almost entirely borne by the government through appropriations for the military, naval and postal air service.
