

Woman Talks to Cuba by Phone

First Omahan to Use New Line of Communication Receives 99th Birthday Greetings.

The first conversation between Havana, Cuba, and Omaha, since telephonic communications were established and officially opened by President Harding Monday, was carried on Friday morning at 11 by Mrs. William Rothschild, 719 South Thirty-eighth street, and her grandson, Mark Pollack, a wealthy planter in Cuba. The call was a congratulatory to his grandmother on her 99th birthday anniversary.

"I heard every word Mark said," Mrs. Rothschild declared after the conversation, "and I did not become tired because I was so happy to hear his voice."

The conversation lasted an hour and cost $372.15. The new line of communication from the United States to Cuba is a combination of deep sea cable, land lines and wireless telephones.

Telephone messages from both coasts and numerous floral tributes were received by Mrs. Rothschild during the day. Mrs. Rothschild has four sons, one in Omaha and three on the coast. She has 10 grandchildren and numerous great-grandchildren.

Aged Parents of Omahans Detained at Ellis Island

In ill health and suffering from hardships to which they were exposed on their long journey from central Europe the aged parents and two sisters of Joseph and Henry Maizelish, 2523 North Eighteenth street, are being detained at Ellis Island. A telegram received from the father declares he is being detained because of ill health. Unless federal authorities reconsider the case, the aged parents may be forced to return without seeing their children.

Promise Made Years Ago is Fulfilled by Priest at Funeral

Fulfilling a promise made many years ago, Bishop P. A. McGovern of Cheyenne said requiem low mass at St. Peter's church Friday for Mrs. Bridget McMillan, 78, who died Tuesday.

Bishop McGovern was born in Omaha and spent his boyhood next door to Mrs. McMillan. She often told the lad "when you grow up and become a priest, I want you to say mass at my funeral."
