Problems That Perplex Answered by BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Nothing Is Not Practical. Dear Miss Fairfax: In answer to the writer of "The Girl Men Like," please accept the viewpoint of a maid barely 21 who, until recently, was in the same predicament as the writer. Man is less ideal than woman; and we must accept him as he is, even though the truth sometimes hurts. He chooses his lady friends because they are pleasing to the eye, entertaining and amusing. Brains and intelligence are neither pleasing to the eye nor always amusing. Unfortunately man is more easily swayed by physical attraction than by mental attraction. Therefore, no man is going to notice a girl until a well-dressed form, a pretty countenance, sparkling eyes, a gracious smile or pleasant word attract him. After a little initiative and good appearance have attracted the male victim, a girl may be her own true self and display her intelligence. A girl should also make an effort to be a good mixer; that is, be very friendly and sociable to every young man she is introduced to, even though he doesn't make a striking impression. Our ideals are not to be found everywhere. Only through mixing with many people can we expect to find "the" one. It is often a discouraging battle for the girl who tries intelligence versus beauty and coquettishness. She should try the latter two as a mere beginning means with the first quality as the goal. R. A.

Why Girls Leave Home Answered By Miss Brice

"Why girls leave home," and so on the stage is a question which has occurred to many people. In the case of Miss Elizabeth Brice, who is appearing at the top of an exceptional bill at the Orpheum this week, it is easily answered. "I have always loved to sing," she explained. "That is why I went on the stage and is one reason I do not care to go into the movies."

When Miss Brice left her little home town in Findley, O., some years ago and went to New York where she became an instant favorite, the folks back home shook their heads and offered words of sympathy to the bereft parents. Occasionally some skeptic from "home" would journey to New York and perhaps call on bright-eyed Elizabeth and then go back a convert to her career. Gradually, as she returned home year after year for the summer, little pink notes of "please come" began fluttering into the home, and Elizabeth Brice was a celebrity in her own home town, which is to say she had "made good" professionally outside for home folks are not usually the first to recognize "the prophet" in their own country.

In her act this week, in which Miss Brice is assisted by Gattison Jones and Al Hickey, there are five beautiful settings for the musical message which she brings in "Love Letters."

Mrs. Hempel Would Change Name of Department.

Mrs. Charles L. Hempel, retiring president of the Omaha Woman's club, in her farewell address at the closing meeting of the season Monday afternoon at the Y. W. C. A., suggested that the name of the political and social science department be changed to department of public welfare.

"Politics have been creeping into the club and we must guard against this," said Mrs. Hempel, "as we are a nonpolitical, nonsectarian organization."

Art Exhibit. The Sisters of St. Dominic and their art students will hold an exhibition of water color and china painting at their studio, 2123 Binney street, on May 5, 6 and 7.

Kensington. Mrs. Floyd King was hostess at a Kensington Monday in honor of Mrs. Russell Henning, who leaves shortly to reside at Thermopoli, Wyo.

Clubdom

Nebraska Honored. Through Mrs. John Slaker, president of the Nebraska Federation of Women's Clubs, Nebraska is honored. Mrs. Slaker will represent the middle west region of states at the council meeting of the General Federation of Women's Clubs in Salt Lake City next June. This group of states includes Nebraska, Kansas, Wisconsin, North and South Dakota and Iowa. A good delegation will probably go from Nebraska. Mrs. C. L. Hempel and Mrs. C. E. Johanness are planning to attend from Omaha. Special cars carrying state delegates to Utah will go through Omaha.

Luncheon for Club Women. Reservations for the luncheon to be given Saturday at the Blackstone hotel by members of the South Omaha Woman's club may be made with Mrs. Edward Burson, South 3346.

A program will be given including vocal solos by Mrs. Grace Poole Steinberg and Miss Lorraine Wallace, accompanied by Mrs. Roscoe Rowley; vocal duet, the Misses Lucy Hill and Bess Rhine, accompanied by Mrs. Walter Hill, and a reading, by Mrs. A. N. Murdock. New officers will be installed.

The president, Mrs. Samuel Shrigley, will preside.

Craik Players in "The Mollusc." On Wednesday evening and Saturday afternoon of this week the Craik players will present in the auditorium of Jacob's hall, 1716 Dodge street, Hubert Henry Davies' successful comedy, "The Mollusc."

The theme of inertia of character is most delicately handled in this comedy of spoiled wives and indulgent husbands. The play has to do with Mrs. Baxter, who, like a mollusc of the sea which clings to a rock, inert, between tides, luxuriates in active selfishness and passive living, doing nothing and having everything done for her. Into this household comes Tom Kemp, brother of "the Mollusc." He strives to cure Mrs. Baxter of her molluscousness and succeeds in doing so only after many humorous conflicts with his sister and after affording the audience numerous mirth-provoking lines and an abundance of sparkling comedy.

Mr. Mark Levings will be seen as Tom Kemp, with Miss Elizabeth Erazim in the title role, Mrs. Nora O'Shea as the governess and Mr. O. W. Craik as the indulgent husband.

HOLDING A HUSBAND

Adele Garrison's New Phase of Revelations of a Wife

The Suggestion the Chauffeur Made to Lillian.

With his face as imperturbable as if he had not been a storm center for several minutes, Jones, the chauffeur, walked toward the car at his employer's grudging capitulation. He went through the same farce of attempting to start it as his employer's son had done, then he began a solemn and exhaustive survey of the engine. I was amused to see that his choleric employer kept his tongue between his teeth, although it was plain to be seen that virilic words were trembling upon it.

"I'm sorry to say, sir," Jones said at last in the carefully respectful tone which I guessed was particularly maddening just then to the elderly man, "that this is going to take more time than I thought."

"How long?" his owner growled. "Perhaps twenty minutes," he returned. "I would suggest, sir, that you all walk up toward the big road. There will be a most unpleasant odor of gasoline and oil presently."

The Rev. Alfred Kaufman of Creighton university, speaker. The public is invited. N. A. P. Y. Club—Wednesday evening, sewing class. Social Settlement house. Henry W. Lawton Auxiliary, U. S. W. Y. Wednesday, 8 p. m., Memorial hall, court house.

Woman's Faculty Club—Wednesday afternoon with Mrs. C. A. Roeder, 2823 Harney street. Dundee Woman's Club—Wednesday, 1 o'clock luncheon with Mrs. Ralph Russell, 5123 Webster street. Annual reports will be read.

Lecture Course—Wednesday, 12 o'clock noon, in studio of Mrs. Effie Steen Kittling, 209 Baird building, Seventeenth and Douglas streets.

A. C. A. Home Education Section—Wednesday, 1:30 p. m., with Mrs. George Morton, 1013 Georgia avenue. George T. Morton will speak on "Civic Planning."

The Mothers' Club—Wednesday, 1 o'clock luncheon with Mrs. H. O. Patterson, 813 William street. Mrs. H. B. Genenagie, assistant hostess. Luncheon will be followed by program.

Get Acquainted Club Party. The Get Acquainted club will entertain at a dancing party Wednesday evening, 8 o'clock at the First Unitarian church common room, Turner boulevard and Harney street.

A short program of readings, songs and dancing will be given under direction of Miss Dorothy De Vere of the LeVera School of Dancing.

There will be games for those who do not dance. Mr. and Mrs. Paul Harlan will chaperone the party. Strangers and lonely folks are welcome.

Again I saw Ted's eyelids quiver in an almost imperceptible wink. I realized that he was fully aware of whatever ruse the chauffeur was employing to get them all out of the way. But he turned and helped the three women out of the car, and dutifully started down the path in the wake of his strutting father.

"Oh, Mr. Ted!" Jones called before he was out of earshot. "If you'll come back in about five minutes, I'll be greatly obliged, sir. I'm afraid I'll need a little help here by then."

"But I Don't." Ted waved his hand assentingly, and for a few seconds after the group of people had disappeared around the bend in the road, the chauffeur pretended to work assiduously at the car. Then, fulfilling an intuition of mine, he crossed swiftly to where we were standing.

"Beg pardon, madam," he said respectfully to Lillian, "but I think I ought to tell you that Mr. Barker will make trouble for you if he possibly can. He never forgets a little thing like this, and if he can find a motorcycle cop after he gets away from here, he'll go out of his way twenty miles to bring him back. I thought I'd tell you, and perhaps you'd like to try some other place. I guess you know that I can fix this car in less than five minutes if I want to—I just disconnected a little wire—but if you want to go away, I can keep it out of commission as long as I want. Mr. Ted's on, but he's a regular fellow. Mr. Ted is not a bit like his father! I called him back so the rest wouldn't suspect anything. Is there any way I can help you if you wish to go away?"

"But I don't wish to go away," Lillian said blithely, flashing a merry glance at me, and reassuring Marion, who had crept frightened to her side, with a clasp of her arm. "Motorcycle cops are most interesting persons, and I don't know of anything I'd rather do in the next few minutes than interview one, especially if your employer happens to be present. But I think you most heartily for your courtesy."

A Bit of Advice. The man studied her frankly for a second, then I saw a sudden gleam of amused comprehension come into his eyes, but he made no comment.

He touched his cap respectfully and went back to his tinkering just before the son of his employer came rather hurriedly down the path.

He was a tall, well-built youth, with more than his share of good looks, and the flush of embarrassment upon his cheeks made him a distinctly attractive picture as he came toward us taking off his hat with the exaggerated deference of the best type of college youth.

"May I apologize for my people?" he asked with a winning manner. "It isn't a particularly pleasant thing for a fellow to have to do, but it certainly is necessary in this case. I cannot hope you will pardon them, but at least I wish you to know how

Postponed Class

The citizenship class, conducted by Mrs. H. H. Wheeler of Lincoln on Friday at the council chamber of the city hall, has been postponed until further notice on account of illness in the family of Mrs. Wheeler. The subject for the next meeting when it occurs will be "The Administrative Code." This will be the 10th and last of Mrs. Wheeler's series of lectures here at this time.

wrong I think their position was." Lillian looked at him, a far different gaze than her eyes had held during our encounter with the lad's father. I knew that the same query on earth had a clean-cut, gentlemanly lad like this—"a regular fellow" the chauffeur had called him—sprung from the family to which he belonged?

At the end of her scrutiny, Lillian smiled and held out her hand. The young chap seized it eagerly.

"Don't give it another thought," Lillian urged him sincerely. "We fully realize that no matter what happens you are not to blame. And—don't judge your father too harshly. He is simply a spoiled grown-up, who has had his way so long that he thinks it simply incredible that anyone should cross him. Unfortunately for himself and everybody else he cannot be put in a corner, or spanked and sent to bed without his supper. If there could be found a grown-up substitute for those things it might be most salutary for him."

For Visitors. Mrs. Charles Ashton entertained at a bridge tea at her home Tuesday for eight guests, honoring the guest of Mrs. Lester Drishaus, Mrs. Sidney Beach of Chicago and Mrs. B. Klausner of Los Angeles. Mrs. Drishaus will entertain at bridge luncheon for her guest Thursday.
