Problems That Perplex Answered by BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Swayed by Others.

Dear Miss Fairfax: I am in love with a young chap, who is in love with me. Our friendship extended back several years and is now real on Wednesday. love. I used to be fickle, and now when I tell my friends I am going to be married they tell me it is only fancy. What proof is there that you love? You know yourself you love him, but still others say it is your imagination. Of course, I wouldn't want to marry him and then find it was a mistake. What would you suggest as a means of trying out my sincerity?
DISTRESSED.

If you're going to take your opinions ready made from all who choose to advise you, there isn't much I can do for you. What does it matter that others say you're fickle if you know that you are loyal and devoted? And what can it mat-ter for me to offer you tests of your feelings if you can't believe in yourself and your own emotions?

Is He Too Severe?

Now, Miss Fairfax, I do not approve of public dancing and she is always telling me about dance halls and all the nice boys that go to them, and when she is not telling me about dancing and the boys at the

Yes, I think the girl could love you and still do her own thinking on the subject of dancing. You must not expect her mind to be an echo of yours. You would soon lose interest expect her mind to be an echo or yours. You would soon lose interest in her if it were.

Two people, who love each other, and want to promote a mutual happiness, try to make adjustments to each other. A girl who truly loved you would not willingly hurt your feelings. But you, however, should practice toleration and sympathy for your girl's exuberance of youth. You your girl's exuberance of youth. You can tell whether she is just naturally spirited or trying to be "smart." If you know it is the latter, I would adyou not to marry the girl, but if the former, then you should try to take a sane, broad view of the girl's interest in dancing and boys—very natural human interests they are, you must remember.

Jealousy Versus Love. Dear Miss Fairfax: I am 35 years old, considered well off, and have been going about with a young man of 26 for four months. The young man claims he loves me but at times I have reason to believe that it is only for my money he cares. Some friends of mine told me that they saw him in the company of other women at various times. Tell me what to do, as I idolize him and life without him would be unbearable. Do you believe the difference in our ages is too much? ALICE L.

The difference in your ages wouldn't keep you from being happy

if you were capable of recognizing the rights of the man you love to his own individuality. If you're going to demand that he live his life only through you and to let jeal-eusy and suspicion creep through into your relation it's bound to be-come unbearable in any case.

Gentlemen—Pyros does all or more than you claimed for it. I will cite one case in particular: Patient, a man of 45 years, teeth loose and gums badly inflamed, had not used the right side of his mouth for masticating for over a year. I prescribed PYROS and in three days' time he was using that side of his mouth and in three weeks' time the inflammation was gone, the gums pink and the teeth perceptibly tighter. We have used PYROS since on similar cases with as good results. You certainly have a wonderful remedy and we (seven operators) are now prescribing it in all cases when a medicament of that kind is indicated. Sincerely.

F. W. MILLER, D. D. S.

PYROS is a strictly ethical and scientific liquid compound prescribed by hundreds of dentists who say its penetrating, antiseptic and astringent power are positively miraculous. Yet it is always friendly to the enamel of the teeth and the healthy tissues of the gums. It cannot harm either—working always to improve—never to injure.

Its unusual penetrating power seeps right through the gums and into the tooth sockets of the jawbone. There the highly germicidal quality of PYROS begins its battle with the germs—always coming out victorious, this battle is slightly painful for a treatment or two until PYROS has established its mastery.
