Denies Girl's Charges.

O. P. Jackson, a former Salvation Army worker, on trial under the Mann act in United States distric court here, denied that he transported Anna Walker Watson from St Joseph to Des Moines for immora purposes. Jackson also denied he was the father of Miss Watson's child. He declared he had been the best friend the woman ever had and supported the child and herself and gave financial aid to her whenever it was necessary during times of distress. According to the testi-mony of Jackson, both he and Mrs. Jackson befriended the woman and gave her employment at the Salvation Army store. He said he distestimony, declared that he was the victim of a conspiracy to extort large sums of money from him, on the charge made by the girl. He said demands had been made upon him both before and after the filing of the criminal action.

Not the least among the important elements contributing to the success accorded Sir James M. Barrie's newest play, "Mary Rose" in which Ruth Chatterton and a distinguished company are to be seen here at the Brandels theater for four performances beginning Thursday evening. May 12, is the delightfully accompanying music, planned by Barrie himself and composed under the dramatist's careful direction by Norman O'Nelll of the Haymarket theater. London. This musical score runs throughout the play's three acts, interpreted by a picked orchestra and a choir of women's voices, under the direction of Elliott Schenck, who performed the same service throughout the long run of "Mary Rose" at the New York Empire theater.

Harry K. Morton, the comedian with the fluent legs, in "The Sweetheart Shop," which opens an engagement of four nights at the Brandels tomorrow night, made his first professional appearance in San Francisco at the age of 4 and has been in the limelight ever since. One year he was a circus acrobat, doing flip-flops over the elephants.
