"Mother o' Mine."

It is not given to every man to be "hanged on a wind-swept hill," nor is such an ending at all attractive...

And men know this. They accept it as one of the things in life not to be questioned, just as they accept the immortality of the soul...

What man is there who does not honor his mother? Who has not felt the influence of her love, reaching out to him through the darkness of the troubled hour...

Mother! No other word in the language means as much. No other love is like hers.

Next Door to Paradise.

Who is the happy warrior? Who is he that every man in arms would like to be?

Wordsworth's query is given a new answer by those organizations in Honolulu that are fostering a plan for an immense home for disabled soldiers on one of the Hawaiian islands.

"The nation needs right now a building that will cost millions, to house the disabled veterans," J. H. Pierce, himself a soldier in the Civil war, said to the Ad club of Honolulu a short time ago.

"And where is the best? Is it not in these islands with which God furnished the world, the true Garden of Eden?"

The skeptical mainland may suspect that the orator has been reading some of the South sea fiction that is now so popular, but with his fundamental thought, that America, having fed the starving world, nursed the wounded and financed so many foreign nations, should not leave its own heroes to suffer without the best of care and comfort.

Too Much Stunt Flying.

Always on the alert for a "thrill," the American public is just now giving close attention to airplane exhibitions. Chances are always much in favor of an accident, wherein a venturesome flyer loses his life, or at best is badly crippled.

A good place to start disarmament would be with Senator Borah.

pressing ever closer and closer to the impossible, and the death of one merely serves to induce others to make the attempt in which the victim failed.

A Very Reno of Marriage.

In South Dakota is a judge who ties the matrimonial knot to stay. Of all the couples who have stood before him and said, "I do," not one has afterward said, "I won't."

So many weddings are only slipknots—in the last 20 years there have been almost 2,000 divorces.

In Nebraska there is one divorce to every 7.33 weddings. This is not a good showing, although 20 other states make a worse one.

Whether it is owing to the worthy influence of the marrying judge of South Dakota or not, figures show that in that state nine couples out of every 10 who marry there do so for keeps.

Elsewhere on this page will be found a short account of the efforts of an Omaha man at establishing civilization among wild people.

Bearing the "White Man's Burden."

This is part of what Uncle Sam has been doing for those islands. It has not been an easy task. The workers have been interfered with by politicians, both at home and over there.

It is not a pleasant thing to think of, the story of the finding of a woman of 30 who has been confined in a darkened room of her mother's home for 16 years.

Tempting the Devil.

Companionship and the stimulation that comes from bodily and mental activity are necessary to the full development of human beings.

This movement on the part of the ship owners to cut down the number of sailors required in each crew might be all right if no accidents and emergencies ever befell in which passengers need every protection.

The New Jersey police woman who was badly beaten in arresting a man criminal will perhaps get a lot of credit when she ought to be given a few lessons in common sense.

For a placé 1,000 miles from nowhere, with a population of 2,700 and an area of 70 square miles, Yap is getting more than its share of publicity.

It begins to appear that the war was lost not only by the Central powers, but by the whole world.

In the old romances people used to die for love, but now they only kill.

Frank W. Carpenter: Hero Wonderful Work Omaha Man Has Accomplished Among Moros

Omaha shortly will have an opportunity to entertain a former resident who really has a claim to distinction, and yet who has so modestly and unassumingly done his share of a great work that few have heard of him.

Carpenter is the biggest man that has ever served in the Philippine government, and he is without a shadow of a doubt, the best friend that the Filipino people ever had or may hope to have, irrespective of race, and including their own patriots.

Who is this man, of whom such seemingly extravagant statements may be made? It is pretty hard to tell in a few words.

In the closing of the term of Frank W. Carpenter as department governor of Mindanao and Sulu, he has just retired and is about to take a vacation after more than 20 years of uninterrupted service in the Philippines.

Carpenter went to the Philippines, with Lawton, a civilian clerk, having completed his enlistment with the Second infantry and entered into the staff service.

The brightest page in Governor Carpenter's career, his magnum opus, his supreme achievement, was his work in the records of the Department of Mindanao and Sulu.

ABOUT SNAKE POISON. A correspondent invites me to read an account of a study of the poisonous qualities of certain serpents and other animals written by members of the Philsalk family.

So endeth the story. Am I converted? No. Shall our people refuse to walk forth for fear of the deadly rattle unless equipped with a gun of wild red eye? Again, no!

But what has all this to do with the snake bite, but manufacturing houses to which I have written say it would not pay to make it, as the demand is too small.

Perhaps the same opinion holds as to Washington, Oregon, and a few other states that would not require much of research work to devise such a remedy.

Department at the Play

From the New York Times. Audiences come in for a scolding in a recent issue of the London Times. Mr. A. B. Walkley, whose veteran services as a first-nighter would have case-hardened a less sensitive spirit, finds that they applaud too much, and most inopportunistically.

Would the true artist be disconcerted, or rather is he? The failure of civilization, alas, is more widespread and devastating than Mr. Walkley seems to know.

Another and more subtle device is well known to all Shakespearean actors of the good old school. When any showy speech was to be delivered, such as the monologue of Jacques on the seven ages of man, the actor "took the center" as far as the dialogue he stood with head bowed in pretended modesty.

Something ought really to be done about it. Acting is the most personal of the arts, more personal even than dancing, for it employs as its executive instrument not the body but the face, the voice—the very mind itself, which kindles to every word, every mood of the drama.

Ultimate in Sincerity. It would be interesting to know what the 362 employees of the league of nations at the headquarters in Geneva, Switzerland, find to do, aside from admiring the scenery.—Springfield, Union.

Better Men for Congress. If the Sheppard-Towner "Better Baby" bill is passed, we shall expect to see a vast improvement in the personnel of congress beginning about 1925.—St. Paul Pioneer-Press.

Palms and Sweet Words

(From the Philadelphia Ledger.) Around Washington seethes and swirls a score of little groups bent and determined upon disbanding the army, scrapping the navy, melting American guns into medals to hang upon themselves and forging the sword of America into gilded halos to place upon their own misguided brows.

They have their own little patter as to the causes of war, gleaned from the arch-pedants of the ages, it merely pains and bores them to recall the great surges of humanity that have run through the centuries, the urges that have sent whole races moving as the salmon move to the sea.

Where Einstein is Lacking. One reason why Professor Einstein's theory appears so opaque to the average American is because he does not use the same sort of language employed by Colonel House.—Galveston Tribune.

MOTHER'S DAY.

All hail to our "Mothers" and "Fathers" as well. To them we owe tribute, as many can tell. Of the pleasures and sorrows together. Let us make them both happy on this special day. They have labored together through sunshine and showers, through adversity and triumph, and through the joys of life. So why not send them a basket of flowers?—Mrs. W. F. P.

She Protected Her Daughter advertisement. As a widow she had grown accustomed to facing business problems. Her daughter was seriously interested in a young man with pronounced spending propensities. In her anxiety about the future the widow consulted a Trust Officer about the disposition of her Estate. As a result of his advice her attorney drew her Will directing that her Estate be managed as a whole by the Trust Company, the income only to be paid her daughter, except in case of dire necessity. This provision had as its basis the eternal foundation of mother love and forethought. Have you also visualized the future for your children's sake? This task will be lightened through a reading of our Trust booklet for women. Your note will bring it to your home. United States Trust Company.
