Jessie Heil Guest Of Omaha Girl

A real American girl is Miss Jessie Heil, young singer, who is appearing at the Orpheum this week. Her vocal training was received in Indianapolis when she resided in Muncie, Ind., and all her experience has been in the United States.

During this week she is the guest of Miss Margaret Beckman at the Morris apartments. The friendship of Miss Beckman and her guest began several years ago in Texas where both were singing in the same opera company.

At one time I wanted to sing in opera but opera companies usually go "broke" and since singing is a business with me, I decided to give up that ambition," said Miss Heil. "A vaudeville audience is odd, it wants to know a singer has a 'bag of tricks' but doesn't really want to hear more than a couple of them. I am a coloratura soprano but the 'stunts' in singing of which a coloratura is capable, I do not often do simply because the audience would tire of it. My real ambition is to do concert singing, but my plans are not definite. No one can see into the future."

Miss Heil will remain in Omaha until Wednesday of next week. She and her hostess have been invited to attend the tea to be given Friday for Miss Ruth Chatterton by members of the Omaha Woman's Press club.

The bridegroom was of white, satin simply draped in becoming lines. Among the Omahans was attended the ceremony were Messrs. and Mesdames Harry Byrne, John Ryan, George Johnson, Charles Kirkpatrick and Walter Dawson.

HOLDING A HUSBAND

Adele Garrison's New Phase of Revelations of a Wife

Why Dr. Pettit Was Not Obedied.

It would have been far less observable driver than Dr. Pettit who could have overlooked Marion at the cross roads where Sam Ticer had said we would intercept the young physician. Without waiting to ascertain the identity of the runaway occupants, she had taken off her shade hat and begun to wave it wildly about her head as the car sped toward us, shouting shrilly the while: "Oh, Dr. Pettit! Stop, please!"

We saw the car slacken, then stop, and the physician leaned forward, on his face the annoyed look of a hurried motorist interrupted in his journey. The girl by his side—a striking brunette with clear, olive skin, lustrous black eyes and cheeks and lips of a carmine tint, which, if it were not natural, was most skillfully put on—was far from being annoyed. Her eyes were sparkling, her whole face held an expression of vivid interest. That she was the type of girl to whom anything unusual is as meat and drink was plainly to be seen from her eager posture as she watched us. When Dr. Pettit recognized us, as he did almost instantly, he muttered a hasty apology to the girl at his side as mechanical as the momentary with which he slipped the car's gear into neutral, and pulled up the emergency brake. Then he descended hastily to the road, strode over to me and held out his hand.

Problems That Perplex

Answered by BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Meeting His Family. Dear Miss Fairfax: Would it be proper for me to visit my gentleman friend's parents, whom I have never met. I am acquainted with him about three months. He wants to introduce me to them. I suppose they want to "give me the once over." My mother thinks it is not proper, as they live in the country. Will you please let me know if you think it would be proper for me to go? I am not engaged. DOTTY. I think that is about as nice a courtesy as a man can pay a woman—to want to take her home and have her meet his family. Of course, if it means an overnight visit, the invitation should come from a woman member of his family, preferably his mother.

About Forty: If you wish to do stenographic work in a hotel (I judge you have public stenography in mind) I think you would have to take the matter up with the management of the hotel. You say you prefer a city smaller than Omaha. Then write to hotels in towns about the size you are interested in. It might be that some of them who do not have public stenographers would be willing to install one. The proposition would probably be that you be given space and possibly a desk without charge, you doing a certain amount of stenography in exchange. Then all you make from guests and outsiders would be your own.

For information regarding stenographic work on passenger steamers, write the various steamship companies. Newspapers from either the eastern or western coast would contain company names. Your stationer and your age are by no means a hopeless bar. If you are a competent stenographer, I think you have a splendid chance of getting a good position.

Chauteau Notes. The Chauteau-Alumnae association, Hall in the Grove, elected the following officers Saturday, at the Prettiest Mile club: Mrs. W. B. Howard, president; Miss Gertrude Bailey, first vice president; Mrs. George Condon, second vice president; Mrs. E. R. Redding, secretary; Mrs. H. P. Curtis, treasurer.

The graduating exercises of the Omaha circles will be held Saturday, June 4, at the Prettiest Mile club, following luncheon which will be served at 1 o'clock.

A Situation. Billy—Reinse me and I shall never love another. Milly—I'm more interested in wondering if you'll ever love another if I accept you.

by at exquisitely fixed-up convalescents just as long as I can. That isn't seeing the seamy side of a physician's work."

Dr. Pettit smiled reluctantly, the sort of half-exasperated, half-indulgent smile one gives to a charming but spoiled child.

An Examination. "Mrs. Graham!" he exclaimed wonderingly. "What is it? You have need of me? Ah, Marion!" He gave the child a smiling nod, and then turned his eyes questioning to my face.

I told him as briefly as possible of the urgent need of his services in the Ticer dooryard to which the woman across the road from the Ticer home had fled for refuge from her savage husband. A quick, comprehending nod, a stern look in his eyes as he listened prefaced a hurried sentence.

A Stubborn Girl. "I know. I've had to sew up that brute's handwork before. I'll run right down. But—it is no place for you or the child or—" he indicated the girl in the other car, who was gazing fixedly at us. "I wonder if of your goodness, you would take her into your car, then I could rush ahead and you could follow when all the unpleasantness has been cleared away."

That the girl had heard him was clearly evident by the perturbed look which flashed over her expressive face, followed by a stubborn setting of her lips. She leaned forward, her eyes brilliant, sparkling.

"Indeed, Dr. Pettit, you cannot dispose of me so summarily!" she cried gayly. "You know I'm perfectly wild to see some of your real cases. I've been ladylike, and smiled sweet-basin of hot, soapy water which Mrs. Ticer had placed upon an improvised bench near where the injured woman lay upon a mattress which I surmised had come from Mrs. Ticer's belongings. I saw that he was watching the moaning woman intently, but not more searchingly than was Miss Foster, whose bright eyes were evidently finding this exhibit of the "seamy side" of a physician's work intensely interesting.

His hands scrubbed to his satisfaction, the physician knelt by the injured woman. Deftly undoing the bandages of our first-aid measures, he made a careful examination of the wound. Then rising, he replaced the bandages, and stood up with a grave face.

"This will have to be a hospital case," he said. "Where is the old beast who did this?"

Sam Ticer indicated with a jerk of the thumb the house opposite, in the shadow of which a figure lurked. "Tell him to come over here at once," Dr. Pettit commanded. "I have several things to say to him."
