

to refrain from participation in European affairs of no concern to the United States and the president may be relied upon to carry out his pledge to disentangle the nation from such participation at variance with this policy as would have resulted from iqualified acceptance of the Versailles treaty

Reply to Criticism.

This is the answer of the adminis tration to those republican senator who have been criticizing the president for resuming representation in allied councils and have been uttering grave forebodings of the entanglements in European affairs to which such a policy they thought would be sure to lead.

The administration takes note also of certain senatorial suspicions that the president's step represents a covert effort to carry the nation beyoud the line of disentanglement from European affairs to which the republican party is committed and involve us in the settlement of Euro-pean questions that would make withdrawal difficult.

The administration pronounces

Trouble Was Expected.

After being up all night clearing up the murder, Warden Fenton, who suspected that perhaps trouble, which he knew had been brewing for some time, might break out, went to the dormitory where the guards slept at 6:30 this morning. He faced 14 guards. One of them aired their demands:

Shorter hours, time off to match Sunday work; guarantee of irequent search of negro prisoners.

"I am running this prison," the warden said. "Those who want to work, follow me. The prisoners are going to breakfast this morning in an orderly fashion, the same as usual."

Three men followed him. The others remained in the dormitory. until an hous later Warden Fenton ordered them to pack their grips and leave.

For a short time there were only two men on the prison walls. Later, other guards volunteered to work overtime and in a few hours most of the routine of the prison was under way as usual.

Fear Future Move.

The principal fear of the irreconcliable senators has been that the administration is proceeding with the intention of resubmitting the Versaillies treaty eventually for ratification with reservations. They were inclined to look upon the re sumption of representation in the allied councils as a step in this direction, particularly as it is well known that several of the most influential members of the cabinet are in favor of the acceptance of the treaty with reservations. Some of the irreconcilable leaders lost no time in sounding President Harding as to his intentions and reported they had received assurances from the executive that he does not contemplate a resubmission of the Versailles treaty. What the president apparently has in mind, according to this report of his views, is the negotiation of treaties with Germany and the allies embodying such provisions of the Versaillies treaty as the United States is willing to accept.

The surrender of Germany to the allies on the reparations terms has cased the situation produced by the criticism of the administration in the senate because it has removed, the time being at least, the posaility of involving the United States in the reparations settlement.
