

Franklin K. Lane, Ex-Secretary of Interior, Is Dead

Death Comes Unexpectedly Early Today at Rochester, Minn.—Was Recovering From Operation.

Edward Island, July 15, 1864, the son of a Canadian doctor who removed to California during the boy's childhood, young Lane was educated at the University of California from which he was graduated in 1886. By reason of his scholastic achievements the honorary degree of LL.D. was conferred upon him some years later by his alma mater and by New York and Brown universities and the University of North Carolina.

Was Editor for Time.
Upon leaving college he engaged in newspaper work, becoming part owner and editor of the Tacoma (Wash.) Daily News. In 1889 he was admitted to the bar of California, and from 1897 until 1902 served as corporation counsel of San Francisco. In the latter year he was the democratic candidate for governor of California, but was not elected. He received the party vote of the state legislature in 1903 for United States senator. Appointed a member of the Interstate Commerce commission by President Roosevelt in 1905, later becoming chairman. Mr. Lane was serving in that capacity when he was made secretary of the interior.

During his service on the Interstate Commerce commission he earned the reputation of being a progressive. His decisions in the railway cases were said to have been almost invariably in favor of the advanced ideas. He favored for years a national corporation commission similar to the Interstate Commerce commission, with power to regulate all business enterprises engaged in interstate commerce as the most effective remedy for trust evils. He also advocated a commission form of government for Alaska. He was elected a member of the permanent International Railway commission, organized in 1910 at the International Railway congress in Bern, Switzerland.

Helped in Mexico Trouble.
In 1916 Mr. Lane headed the American delegates at a joint conference with high commissioners from Mexico, as a result of which a protocol was signed at Atlantic City and United States troops were withdrawn from that country.

When the United States entered the war in 1917, Secretary Lane in a number of public speeches outlined the country's purposes and urged business to show "sacrifices as worthy as those of the men on their way to the trenches." In numerous addresses in behalf of the Liberty loans he declared the defeat of the United States was "unthinkable" and that the government was determined to see the war fought to a finish.

When peace came he devised plans for the employment of returning troops, urged congress to federalize the Americanization of the foreign-born, aided in the reconstruction of France and other war-torn nations and advocated immediate passage of a bill to give farmers to soldiers. He was also active in the council for national defense and the American Red Cross.

Secretary Lane was a keen supporter of the league of nations covenant and advocated ratification of the peace treaty of Versailles. Mr. Lane married in 1893 Miss Anne Wintermute of Tacoma, Wash. Two children were born to them, Mrs. Nancy Lane Kaufman of Washington and Lieut. Franklin K. Lane, jr., U. S. A., of Los Angeles.

Government May Hold Bargain Sale Of Battleships

Naval Department Studying Advisability of Disposing Of Useless War Craft As Junk.
Washington, May 18.—A "bargain sale" of obsolete naval vessels, including battleships and destroyers, may be held by the Navy department soon, it was indicated today. A study of the ways of getting rid of many useless war craft, it was said, and it was indicated that the example of Great Britain might be followed in selling useless ships to be broken up for junk.

There are 21 battleships and as many destroyers carried on the "second line" list and officers say that more than half of the former should be disposed of. All except two battleships are of the "mixed battery" type, most of them carrying four 12-inch guns and eight 8-inch guns, while the Kentucky, Illinois and Wisconsin mount obsolete 13-inch main battery rifles. Included in the "second line" list is the famous old battleship Oregon, but it is doubtful if the department will order it scrapped because of sentimental considerations. The latest and most useful battleships on the "second line" list are the Michigan and the South Carolina, both launched in 1908, but in the opinion of naval men, long since practically valueless except for training. In addition the Navy department has taken steps to dispose of four other vessels. The Indiana was sunk by placed bombs and big gun fire; the Massachusetts became a target for the guns of the coast defense batteries in Florida; the Idaho is being used for radio control experiments and is destined to take a prominent part in the coming bombing tests, and the Kearsarge has been tentatively allocated to the army for use in aerial bombing experiments this summer.

English Premier Reiterates His Stand on Silesia

Lloyd George Declares Fate Must Be Decided by Supreme Council and Not by Insurgent Korfanty.

London, May 18.—(By The Associated Press.)—Prime Minister Lloyd George issued a statement today reiterating the British attitude towards the upper Silesian question expressed by him in his recent speech in the House of Commons and disclaiming responsibility for the "distorted" reports in the French newspapers.

In the course of the statement he said: "The fate of upper Silesia must be decided by the supreme council and not by Korfanty." He continued: "Children of the treaty cannot be allowed to break crockery in Europe with impunity. Somebody must place a restraining hand on them, otherwise there will be continual trouble. Must Carry Out Pact. "Great Britain cannot consent to stand by whilst the treaty her representatives signed less than two years ago is being trampled upon."

The prime minister's statement began as follows: "I adhere to the statement I made in the House of Commons on the subject of Silesia. Naturally I can only accept responsibility for what I actually said and not for the truncated and distorted reports in the French newspapers. The almost unanimous approval given by the American and the Italian, as well as the British press, to the sentiments I then expressed shows that the great nations who stood by the side of France in the war mean to interpret the treaty of Versailles fairly."

"I have never witnessed such unanimity of any question," he continued, "All shades of opinion in these three countries take the same view. It would be unfortunate were the French press to take a different view, but we must be tolerant of differences of opinion amongst ourselves. Scores French Press. "With all respect I would say to the French press that the habit of treating every expression of allied opinion which does not coincide with their own as an impertinence is fraught with mischief. That attitude of mind, if persisted in, will be fatal to any enterprise. The stand taken by the British, American and Italian governments on Silesia ought not to be offensive to the French. They mean to apply the terms of the treaty justly, whether they happen to be for or against Germany. "The fate of upper Silesia must be decided by the supreme council and not by Korfanty. He cannot be allowed to break crockery in Europe with impunity. Future Holds Much. "The course of the world in the coming years cannot be forecast. The mists ahead are more than usually dense. Much will depend upon the allies holding together. "Apart from treaty obligations, events which cannot be foreseen must determine the future groupings of the nations, and the future of the world and especially of Europe will be determined by old or new friendships. "Under these circumstances the treaty of Versailles is a document of infinite moment—especially to the nations of the entente. It binds us together when there is so much to divide us. Those who treat its provisions as if they were the sport of passion and prejudice may not have to live long to regret their hot-headedness."

Transportation Act Defended by Rail President

Head of Baltimore & Ohio Says Act Made Operation Possible Under Private Ownership.
Washington, May 18.—The transportation act "has made it possible for American railroads to be operated successfully under private ownership," Daniel Willard, president of the Baltimore and Ohio, declared before the senate committee investigating railroad operations. Mr. Willard continued his criticism of labor union suggestions that railroads could be more economically managed. "Railroad management is one of the occupations in which it is considered discreditable to succeed," he remarked. "When a railroad president gets $50,000 a year, it is regarded as wasteful expenditure and a rebuke to him and his corporation. I've advised my own son to take some other line where he would not be subjected to discredit because he succeeded. American railroads "are good railroads and have a record of satisfactory war service and should be entitled to a settlement with the government on a liberal basis." President A. H. Smith of the New York Central testified. The assertion concerning a liberal settlement provoked considerable discussion, during which Chairman Cummins said that the lawmakers "never dreamed that the settlement over government ownership would be dragging on this long, but some of the railroads haven't even presented their accounts."

Reduction of U. S. Armament Urged At Chicago Meet

Rev. William Merrill Says First Step Taken in Speech Before Alliance for International Friendship.

Chicago, May 18.—The initial step in reduction of armaments had been taken by the United States, the Rev. William Merrill, chairman of the American branch of the World Alliance for International Friendship, declared in an address before the congress on reduction of armaments. He urged America to adopt a policy of reduction rather than expansion, even if other nations failed to agree to limitation of armaments.

The conference, which is being attended by delegates from 18 states, is being held in connection with the sixth annual meeting of the Alliance for International Friendship. International friendship will restore business prosperity and international law will be an effective substitute for wars, Edward A. Filene, a business man of Boston, said. "The road back to the plateau of peace is hard," he said. "Progress demands international friendship. Restoration of business after the war demands that we act and think nationally like good neighbors—not fight like bad neighbors."

Churches Should Lead.
Rev. Merrill denounced unrestrained competition in armament as a crime and added that "on the part of America" it was an "unpardonable sin." He declared if the disarmament movement failed, part of the responsibility would rest on the churches. "When our naval and military leaders, including General Pershing, plead for radical reduction, how can the churches hold back?" he asked. "Every pulpit ought to urge our national government to take the lead in calling a conference from which will come an agreement to cut down ruthlessly, all preparations for war."

If other nations refused to join the United States, he declared, he wanted America to announce a policy of reduction rather than expansion, but not to "strip off its armament while others remained fully equipped." He said he wanted the United States to limit armament expenditures to 90 per cent of the national income. He declared there was no reason for American naval expansion, adding that Japan could not compete with America in naval building and that a naval policy contemplating war, with Great Britain was "shameful." Europe Too Poor to Buy. "There is only one reason why America should build the biggest navy," he concluded, "and that is the gratification of national pride and boastfulness." Mr. Filene, dealing with the business aspect of international relations, said that the basic cause of the country's business crisis was America's inability to export surplus materials because Europe is too poor to pay. To get back on her feet, Europe must have America's assistance, he said. The plan to ask the 150,000 clergymen of the country to preach June 5, appealing for reduction of armaments, was settled this afternoon. The delegates also were urged to have their organizations communicate with their senators and representatives relative to the calling of a conference on disarmament.

Wymore, Neb., May 18.—(Special.)—Much amusement was found at a social gathering here over a discussion of "Main Street," the novel that has been attracting such widespread comment. The consensus of opinion was that the effete east had best come out here via the midwest route, and then have the same author write another story. The picture presented by those who laughingly discussed the matter afforded an answer to the book itself. The women wore many Paris frocks (not gowns, if you please), the men were at home in their evening clothes, a string orchestra played softly behind flowering vines on the wide "porch" and the laugh that went round at the thought of people "back east" being gulled into a feeling of superiority, or pity for the poor people toward whom they use the term "provincial" was cut short by one guest who suggested that an organized effort be made through state chambers of commerce to entreat all secure tourists to take the midwest, instead of the northern route in their trips across country.

Rainmaker Asked To Turn Faucet Off for Few Days

Charles Hatfield Is Making Too Good on Contract to Furnish Moisture to Canadian Farmers.
Medicine Hat, Alberta, May 18.—Old Jupiter Pluvius must be on friendly terms with Charles M. Hatfield, the rainmaker. After making rain for about a month, prairie farmers have asked Hatfield to turn off the moisture for a few days. Tillers of the soil, who for years have been expecting droughts, are satisfied that Hatfield can deliver the rain as per contract and as Hatfield has already made about $3,000 for his month's work everybody is happy except those who continue to sneer at the rainmaker's "scheme."

Whether or not Hatfield's presence in the district is responsible, the fact remains that rain has come since his arrival. Old timers declare they have never seen such heavy precipitations or such a continuous presence of so many heavy clouds. Hatfield has erected his apparatus on the eastern shore of Clappie lake, a substantial body of water with several small lakes surrounding it, the structure or tower is 24 feet high, supporting a wooden tank 14 feet square. It is stated by Hatfield to be the largest tank he has yet used. He says it is in this that the chemicals are placed which form the secret process.
