Problems That Perplex

Answered by BEATRICE FAIRFAX

No Use Mourning.

Dear Miss Fairfax: I am a young girl of 20 years and am in love with a young boy of about the same age and really know that he cares for me. But for some reason which I do not know he broke off. What would you advise me to do? Thanking you, I remain, IMPATIENT.

That kind of disappointment must be accepted along with the other disappointments of life. Just get so busy with some other interest that you will soon replace your lonesome memories of him. He is not interested in some other girl, and there is just no use in mourning over things.

Paty: If you are willing to do housework, as you say you are, I think you could find work in Omaha and if you go to a nice family, I think you would be perfectly safe. A girl's best protection is always found in her own desire to do right.

If you do come to Omaha, I would advise you to consult the Y. W. C. A. employment bureau, before coming, and have a prospective position in mind. The Big Sisters would also be ready to offer you advice should you feel the need of it.

I do not know how you could make boys talk politely, but I do know you need not listen. Keep away from the people who do not talk decently, and if they start it when you are around, leave.

A Mother: The 12-year-old boy you speak of sounds to me like a case for the doctor. His flushed face makes me think he has heart trouble, but really my advice on this subject might miss the mark sadly. Better consult a reliable physician.

Eighteen: A girl is of age in Nebraska at 18. She then does not have to have her parents' consent to marriage—but what girl would disregard her parents' advice at so early an age?

Two Question Boxes: What makes you think I will tell you to stay at home and study and not go with boys? The company of good boys is good for good girls and vice versa. Your letter sounds sensible and I judge your parents have an eye on you, so I think you are not sadly in need of advice from me.

I cannot tell you how old a girl should be before she goes with boys. That is something to be determined by the girl's sense, not her age. Some girls are never old enough to go with boys; others are always better for a broad-minded association with the other sex. Keep right on using the good sense which you show you possess and you will be happy. As for moles, electrolysis will remove them.

Meeting for Eighth Grade Pupils. J. G. Masters of Central High school will address all eighth grade pupils and their parents of this city Friday afternoon at 2 p. m. in Central High school auditorium.

The curriculum committee of the Parent-Teachers' association, of which Mrs. A. R. Fetters is chairman, will be present with information regarding entrance requirements of the various colleges of the country.

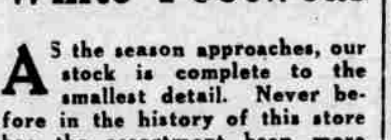

This is being done in order that students registering for high school may plan their course of study so that it will fulfill all the requirements of the college they may attend.

HOLDING A HUSBAND

Adele Garrison's New Phase of Revelations of a Wife

The Question Lillian Asked.

I waited with a good deal of interest for the reappearance of Miss Foster and Dr. Pettit at the hospital door. They were possessed of such diametrically opposed temperaments that I wondered at the outcome of a clash between their wills such as had seemed inevitable when they took the child of the wounded woman into the hospital.

But when they finally came out again and walked toward the car I saw that Miss Foster's youthful volatile spirits had triumphed over her own temper, and the physician's outraged dignity. She was chatting volubly, and smiling upward into the sky, and Dr. Pettit had never given a second thought to his personality or to his protestations—an assertion which I could not truthfully make about Allen Drake or Major Grantland, innocuous as my friendship with both of them had been—but I could not deny that I wished myself anywhere else than in the role of gossamer in the drive back to the Ticer house.

In my desire to appear matter-of-fact and oblivious, I moved toward the car as I saw them coming, climbed into the driver's seat and turned the ignition switch. Had seen nothing for Dr. Pettit, and had never given a second thought to his personality or to his protestations—an assertion which I could not truthfully make about Allen Drake or Major Grantland, innocuous as my friendship with both of them had been—but I could not deny that I wished myself anywhere else than in the role of gossamer in the drive back to the Ticer house.

He hesitated, and I interpreted his thought. "Won't you drive, then?" I asked. "I would not dare to drive as fast as you could with perfect safety."

"If you really do not mind" he said, with relief spreading over his countenance. "If you and Miss Foster will just climb into the tonneau then, I've got something to think out, and can't talk this trip."

A Breathless Drive. His face held the professional absorption which I often had seen upon it in the old times, and I knew that no woman's charm, no matter how potent, could stir him in this girthing up of his powers for the next battle with death which he must wage. I looked quickly, furtively at Miss Foster to see how she would relish this sudden shunting of her to the background. She was gazing at the physician with a speculative appraising look, in which I detected no resentment. It was the look a child

Ticer gate he descended hurriedly, tossing a word of apology back over his shoulder.

"I'm sorry not to take your car in, Mrs. Graham, but I know you won't mind. Hurry, Miss Foster, please, if you're coming with me."

He strode across the lawn—I never have seen him run—to his own car, climbed into it, and set the engine running. Miss Foster had waited for a hasty farewell to me, yet she was before him, for she had skimmed across the lawn like a bird to her place in his runabout.

In another half-minute Miss Foster's handkerchief was waving a fluttering farewell through a cloud of dust, and I turned to face the battery of inquiries with which the Tickers and Marion were listening for me.

Lillian, in the background, waited intently, but asked no questions and made no comment until the curiosity of the entire family had been satisfied and we were once more in our own quarters, with Marian absorbed outside in being taught how to milk. Then Lillian spoke nonchalantly, as though the subject had but a cursory interest for her.

"Is Dr. Pettit as interested in that young woman as he appears to be?" (Continued tomorrow.)

The Real Secret of Rejuvenating the Face

She holds the true secret of facial rejuvenation who has learned how to remove the dead skin particles as fast as they appear. It's a secret anyone may possess. The aged, faded, or discolored surface skin may be gradually absorbed, in an entirely safe and rational manner, by the highly application of ordinary mercolized wax. Within a week or two the underlying skin, youthful and beautiful to behold, has taken the place of the discarded cuticle. So little of the old skin is absorbed each day there's no inconvenience at all, and no sunburn as you are putting anything on your face. The mercolized wax, procurable at any drug store (an ounce is sufficient), is applied like cold cream. In the morning it is erased with soap and water. It's the best thing known for freckles, blackheads, pimples, moles, patches, liver spots and fine surface wrinkles.

For the deeper wrinkle, an excellent recipe is: Powdered azoelite, one ounce, dissolved in one-half pint witch hazel. Rubbing the face in the solution produces quick and wonderful results.

How to Rid the Arms of Objectionable Hairs

(Aids to Beauty) A simplified method is here given for the quick removal of hairy or fuzzy growths and rarely is more than one treatment required: Mix a stiff paste with some powdered delatone and water, apply to hairy surface and after 2 or 3 minutes rub off, wash the skin and every hair has vanished. This simple treatment cannot cause injury, but care should be exercised to get real delatone.
