Insurance Epert Favors Review of Rates by States

Formation of Local Companies To Compete With Eastern Concerns Advocated by Alfred M. Best.

That states ought to review insur ance rates as to reasonableness and adequacy toward licensing insurance companies, in place of a private exchange holding control over the various companies, is the belief of Alfred M. Best, expert insurance critic and editor of numerous insurance pamphlets in New York City.

Mr. Best was in Omaha Sunday and Monday in consultation with insurance men on private matters.

The middle west is not backward in the insurance business, Mr. Best declared.

Believes in Local.

"In the last five years numerous local companies have been estab lished, and with success," he said "I believe in the formation of local companies if they are big enough to compete with eastern insurance firms It encourages competition.

The present money stringency has not affected the insurance business materially," Mr. Best continued. "Of course, there has been a tendency of large business firms to carry no heavier insurance on their property during this business depression.'

Mr. Best said that the greatest increase in volume of property values in the middle west will take place within the next 20 years.

Though new insurance companies are springing up throughout the west, foreign firms are writing about 40 per cent of this country's fire and marine insurance, Mr. Best said.

Policies for $1,000,000,000 Issued. Nearly $1,000,000,000 in fire and marine insurance was written in this country in the past year, nearly 100 per cent increase over the previous record, Mr. Best stated. While in Omaha, Mr. Best was the guest of William J. Hotz, 2415 North

Forty-fifth avenue. The noted insurance expert leaves tonight for New York, where he will reappear before the Lockwood investigating committee of the New York legislature, which is probing the alleged private control of insurance business in that state. Mr. Best was an expert witness before that committee.

More Truth Than Poetry

DOWN WITH TOBACCO.

Thou rank cigar, that numbs my brain, Thou noxious pipe, with recking bowl, No longer shall I vow in vain To shake the shackles from my soul. Thou nerve destroying cigarette, Thou slab from which I cut my "chaw," Upon ye all will soon be set The stern faced minions of the law!

No more I'll dull with nicotine My once untrammell'd power of thought,
My left bicuspid's ivory sheen
Again shall gleam the way it ought.

No more beneath the doctor's eye I'll clutch my breast and stare and start, What time I hear him sternly cry: "Young man, you've got tobacco heart!"

The law shall save me from these things, No pipe, cigar nor cigarette Can touch me when the statute flings About me its protecting net. I'll look the whole world in the face, I'll fear no fate, not even death, And there will be no taint nor trace Of nicotine upon my breath.

And I'll be glad, yes glad indeed! With rapture will my chest expand, Upon the instant that the weed Is banished from my native land. But in the meantime here's a torch A neighbor left the other night, And so wel'll sit here on the porch

Common Sense

By J. J. MUNDY.

Useless Questions. Don't ask questions that you could inswer if you would think.

There are few so annoying as those who will ask information rather than think or look for themselves. It should not be necessary for anyone to give you the same information more than once.

In nearly every office there are some employes who depend on others to tell them things they should know about their own work.
When told they merely use the information for the time being and that is, tested make no effort to impress their own showed the rule to be wrong. Thus minds with the necessary facts. It is an easy way to avoid thinking, and it also is just the way to lose ultimately the power to think. It is so easy to let your desk partner remember for you, isn't it? It is so easy to let the other fellow keep track of the way the wind blows, figuratively speaking.

Mental laziness is the worst form of laziness and is mental suicide. Some day you will regret your inability to think, for brains are more and more in demand each year. Copyright, 1921, International Feature Service, Inc.
