Harding Meets Financiers for Consultation

Contrary to Report, New President Not First to Hear Views Of Business Authorities On Problems.

By HOLLAND.

President Harding was not the first of the presidents to meet a group of men who had gained influence and distinction in finance and industry, that none of his predecessors were even in consultation with a company made up of men who were of consequence in the field of finance and in-

President Grant did this, although the place of meeting was not at the White House, where recently the Total receipts . meeting by invitation between Harding and a strong group of financial leaders took place. General Grant came to New York for the purpose of meeting a considerable company of those who were identified with the larger banking and financing operations of the time. The so-called inflation bill had been passed by congress and was in the president's hands. Grant met the New York financiers at the Union League club. He was with them some six hours. He listened intently to all they had to say. He asked many questions, but it was impossible to gather from his words or the expression of his face what was in his mind. He went back to Washington

This gathering at the White House of men of finance and the part which Secretary of the Treasury Mellon took in the informal discussions at the dinner table and later make it opportune to speak now of the impression that the secretary of the treasury has established with the leading minds in finance and in industry.

When he became secretary of the treasury is 621 in March a report was circulated that he had accepted the treasury portfolio with a mental reservation that he would remain in that office possibly not longer than one year.

and as they secure this they are likely to sell their July, which will release that delivery and help the aborts. In case there is not a liberal after harvest movement, the July shorts will be in bad.

An important feature in the Inglis report was his claims that the carry over of old wheat will be the smallest in years, which, combined with his claims of damage, made the effect more bullish.

A big export business was done yesterday; according to some reports, one of the largest days business on the crop. Some estimates placed the amount of wheat sold at 600 loads, which would be 4.500,000 bushels. Other advices indicated about 2.500.900 bushels. Particulars of this business were a little vague and it was not stated whether the business was in the old or new wheat, the presumption being that it was part for June shipment and part for deferred shipment. Italy was reported to have taken about 2,000.000 bushels and France was again reported to be in the market.

Receipts of corn were again heavy and there is nothing to indicate there will be much latup in the movement for some time. Few houses bid the country last night. The eastern demand is reported practically dead of several of the big shippers. One house that has been doing a big share of the business said there was not a bid from the east, either domestic or export. The eastern call for oats was also low, and receipts showed a considerable increase.

The British government has raised the price of Argentine wheat 1 shilling per quarter, making a 2-shilling advance in two days. Manitoba wheat was reduced i shilling per quarter and American winter wheat was raised 1 shilling.
