Wanted.

A tiny house, no more, no less, with only room for happiness; Where kindness shades the searching light And happy hearts hold court each night; Where doors are barred from sorrow's din And only Love may dwell therein. They tell me, Life, you're just a few such houses—Could I have one, too?

—Gertrude Callaghan.

One can save gas by doing a baking along toward noon and put potatoes away in back to bake. Boil vegetables in the master and heat water there or on top of the oven.

Chicago Show Entrant

Miss Daphne Peters is here seen on "Twilight," the horse she will ride at the South Shore Horse show in Chicago June 8-10. Miss Peters is probably the best equestrienne in Omaha. It was a great disappointment to society that Miss Peters and the other women who were to have ridden Thursday in an opening parade at the Ak-Sar-Ben races did not appear. The heavy track prevented.

Clothes and Personality

"Clothes do not make the man, but they do make the woman, or at least they do affect her personality to a great extent," said Miss Theodore Whitfield, leading woman of the Princess Players at the Brandeis. It was in reference to the clothes of Penelope Penn, the little heroine of "Thirty-nine East" that Miss Whitfield made the foregoing statement. And Miss Whitfield ought to know because for 30 weeks she wore the clothes of the quaint little country Penelope and despite the fact that the company played all the large cities of the east, including Washington, Philadelphia, Boston and Baltimore, Miss Whitfield says she really became like the little heroine in feeling. "You see," said Miss Whitfield, "when you wear home made frocks and dainty little hats so much of the time you can't think in terms of Lucille and Fifth avenue."

Miss Whitfield was not the only one who noticed how completely she had become Penelope Penn through wearing Penelope's clothes. Rachel Crothers, the author of the play, was also aware of the fact, and when the company closed, she gave Miss Whitfield Penelope's clothes asking her to wear them if she ever played Penelope again. So this week at the Brandeis Miss Whitfield is following Miss Crothers' instructions in wearing the same costumes she wore when she first played Penelope. The picture shows Miss Whitfield, Miss Crothers, the author, and Sydney Blackmore, Miss Whitfield's original leading man.

By CORINNE LOWE.

New York.—(Special Correspondence.)—Is organdy more jazzed against than jazzing? The question is an open one. For, as against the various proofs of how much organdy does to trim, we have the equally impressive spectacle of how much other things do to trim it. Perhaps the latest idea in making the simple old time organdy look like the dressiest of dance frocks is to embroider it in metal thread. Point sent us a model of this kind, and the thought has been developed by numerous New York designers. For the girl who intends to go to

Pastel Shades to Dominate in Fall

Pastel shades are to reign supreme as evening colors for the coming autumn and winter season, according to reports from manufacturers. Many of the new evening shades have assumed what might be denoted as a blending of colors, and the names applied to them are quite as attractive as the colors themselves. To be quite smart this fall one will not ask for a pale green frock but for an "Elfi" shaded gown. If mildly desires a dainty pink she will make her wants known by requesting a "Roseleaf" gown. Should she be of the brunette type and prefer one of light citron she will merely ask to be shown a gown of "Butterfly" hue, while her blonde sister perhaps will choose an "After-glow" frock if she wishes to be becomingly attired in bluish lavender. Madame who would appear in a flameshot coral robe may call for "Aurora," and her desires will be granted.

Guest Invitations.

It is customary to limit the visit of a guest when giving the invitation, and by asking your visitor to come at a certain time and stay for a week or month or 10 days, it can be done so the guest cannot take offense.

Lecture Series.

Mrs. Ida Kruse McFarlane of the University of Denver will give a series of eight lectures on "New Books and New Plays" next year under the auspices of the Delphian society. The first lecture will be given some time in October.

CAPTAIN FARRIS GIVES IT STRONG ENDORSEMENT

Burlington Business Man Says Nothing Reached His Troubles Until He Got Tanlac—Health Restored.

Characteristic of the statements which have made Tanlac a household word from one end of this continent to the other, is that of Captain Eugene M. Farris, head of the Farris Construction and Diving company, with offices on Front St., Burlington, Iowa. In relating his remarkable experience Captain Farris said:

"I became a believer in Tanlac three years ago when it relieved me of stomach trouble of 10 years standing. Nobody ever suffered any worse than I did and although I spent hundreds of dollars for various medicines and treatments nothing did me any good.

"Tanlac proved to be different from all the rest and suited my case exactly. It went to the origin of my trouble and soon had me feeling like a new man. I take a dose of it every now and then and it keeps me in the pink of condition. It certainly has an unusual power to give a man an appetite, take up his stomach, and make him feel fine. It's my standby and I recommend it to others."

Angeles and San Diego before their return.
