

State Bank May Take Account of Closed Pioneer Depositors May Be Able to Check Against Former Institution Monday, President Says.

The deposit accounts of the Pioneer State bank, amounting to about $430,000, may be taken over by the State Bank of Omaha, following negotiations by the state banking examiners.

The Pioneer State bank was closed yesterday morning, following an investigation into its affairs by T. J. McGuire, assistant attorney general, and J. E. Harte, secretary of the department of trade and commerce.

Failure of the bank was attributed to "frozen securities," Attorney General Davis said he doubts whether there will be any loss to the state guarantee fund.

The bank's connection with the Colonial Timber and Coal corporation of West Virginia and $200,000 notes carried for the Guarantee Securities company, owner of the building, are given as contributory causes of the failure.

E. H. Matters, now serving a five-year sentence in Leavenworth for violation of the national banking laws, was interested in the sale of timber lands in West Virginia to the Colonial company.

A. L. Schantz, president of the State Bank of Omaha, declared that he hoped to take over the accounts of the Pioneer State bank in time to permit depositors to check against the bank Monday.

Mr. Schantz said he understood the Pioneer State bank had 700 checking accounts.

Herrera's Suicide Puzzles His Widow Only Reason Advanced for Act of Indian War Hero Is Ill Health.

The motive which led young Paul Herrera to commit suicide Wednesday night is puzzling his wife, formerly Miss Sarah White, 5007 Hamilton street.

"He left the house in good spirits," said Mrs. Herrera. "The only reason I can give is ill health."

Her father, Homer White, corroborates the wife's suggestion.

"Paul had been going to a doctor for his lungs," said Mrs. White. "He was worried about his health, for he had been wounded and gassed overseas."

Mrs. Herrera refused to divulge the contents of the note left by her husband.

"It was a last note, and is personal," she declared.

Funeral services for young Herrera will be held at Fero's chapel at 3 this afternoon. The American Legion and the reserve officers' corps will be in charge.

Noonday Luncheon Planned in Honor of Bishop Tuttle

The committee of arrangements on the entertainment of the Rt. Rev. Daniel S. Tuttle, presiding bishop of the Episcopal church, who will visit in Omaha, June 8, has definitely planned for a noon day luncheon at the Happy Hollow club, which all church leaders are expected to attend.

Out-of-town clergy are invited to this luncheon as guests of the Omaha clericals. In the evening a mass meeting will be held at Trinity cathedral at 8, at which Bishop Tuttle will be the principal speaker.

Bond Proposition for Purchase of Garbage Incinerators Initiated

The city council learned yesterday that Harry V. Hayward cannot haul city garbage under the present contract allowance of $45,000 a year from the city.

Mr. Hayward has been hauling the garbage since Henry Pollock quit the job last fall.

"It will cost more than $10,000 a month for June, July and August of this year," said Mr. Hayward. "I can't continue to operate under this contract."

Hayward said he would waive his contract if the city will relieve him as bondman for Mr. Pollock.

A proposition to be voted on this fall to issue $300,000 bonds for purchase of incinerators was initiated.

"The garbage question will continue to be a troublesome problem until the city votes bonds for incineration plants," said Commissioner Zimman.

'Passing the Buck' Is Popular Sport That's What Col. T. W. McCullough Tells Kiwanians Is Present Day Fault.

The favorite indoor and outdoor sport is "passing the buck," according to Col. T. W. McCullough of The Bee who addressed the members of the Kiwanis club at their noonday luncheon at the Rouse hotel yesterday noon.

"There are times when every man should present himself at the bar of his own conscience and take inventory," Colonel McCullough said.

"Too often when things go wrong those really at fault cast around for someone on whom to lay the blame, where the manly and fair way to do would be to own up to their shortcomings. Each man owes to his fellow man respect and consideration. Each man should determine his relationship to his neighbor and live up to it as closely as possible."

In speaking of the reactions following the late war Colonel McCullough said that many institutions had been torn down; that while man-made laws have been broken, the natural and moral laws are still as absolute as before.

He said not only hard work will bring back stable conditions in business and society, but that there is a need of more spiritual vision and man to man humanity.

Minneapolis Hotel Clerk Held on Mann Act Charge

William C. Gallagher, hotel clerk from Minneapolis, was bound over to the federal grand jury in federal court yesterday on a Mann act charge. Gallagher had his hearing before United States Commissioner E. C. Boehler.

Special Agent E. W. Byrn, Department of Justice chief in Omaha, presented Gallagher.

Gallagher was arrested two nights ago in the Sanford hotel in company with Miss Vernon Clark of Cedar Rapids, Ia., whom he is alleged to have transported to Omaha. His bond was set at $1,000.

Commerce High Students Visit Slum Districts

Students in the social problems department of the High School of Commerce, under the direction of R. L. Snetzer, spent yesterday afternoon in visiting the slum districts of Omaha, picking up information which will aid them in solving the problems which the city faces from day to day.

Anna Zalk and Beth Ellington, juniors at Commerce, spent the afternoon in looking over the tenement districts.

"At one flat," their report reads, "we knocked at every door on the fourth floor, but none would answer. Finally we gave a couple of yells and then everybody came outside to see what was the matter. We introduced ourselves and gained some startling information as to the standard of living of families whose heads work in the South Omaha stock yards."

"The filth and stench from some of the rooms where whole families were crowded together was something furious." The tenements which these girls visited were near Thirteenth and William streets.

John Knezeck visited the section near the city dump, from Ninth to Eleventh on Seward street. He said that his interviews were failures, as the people refused to divulge any information.

The river bottoms, settled by "squatters" in the section from Briggs to Sprague streets in East Omaha, were given the "once over" by John Polerick. Several of the little homes he visited were exceptionally clean and neat, surrounded by gardens crowded with flowers in full bloom.

Women and children with shoes, whole families where the only pair of shoes was possessed by the father, also featured John Knezeck's report to the class. Two-room houses holding large families, from 5 to 10 children in each, where the bunks composed the entire furniture, and where no charity worker ever penetrated, also were visited.

More Jobs Needed For Ex-Service Men

"Though 'Hire a Hero week' has been a success, Adj. H. C. Hough of the American Legion says he still needs more jobs for ex-soldiers.

House cleaning and grass cutting are real "life-savers," Hough emphasizes to housewives.

"These men want any kind of work," he said. "They haven't even the price of the next meal."

Lumber Dealers Ask Roads To Reduce Freight Rates

Washington, June 3.—Shippers of lumber and of road building materials from practically every section of the country urged in separate conference here with railroad officials, the immediate reduction of freight rates on those commodities to the level in effect before the general increase of last August. Railroad officials said they would reply to the requests soon.

Shippers of road-building materials contended that road-building, so far as counties and municipalities were concerned, was at a practical standstill, because of high freight rates.

Indian Summonses Make Marshal Gasp

31 Processes to Be Served at Winnebago Reserve Handed To Deputy.

When Deputy United States Marshal Earl Young was confronted yesterday with 31 federal summonses to serve on Indians at the Winnebago reservation, he gasped for air and steady balance.

"Just a little work for ye," remarked John Nicholson, chief deputy clerk of the federal court, when he handed Young the summonses on Indian land cases to come up in federal court.

"Huh?" exclaimed Young, dumfounded.

"Yeah, huh?" chuckled Emmet Quinley, deputy marshal, still fostering a clear memory of serving 60 similar summonses on Indians four years ago.

"You ain't heard nuthin' yet," added Quinley. "Wait'll you hear those Indians when they get those summonses. They won't wait for ye to bring 'em to Omaha. They'll hop the first freight."

After racking his brain to decipher the names of My Soul Tiebold, Chief Bull's Eye, U. S. Grant, Lucy Thunder and Silas Raisin King on the summonses Young declared he would dispatch the papers to another deputy on the reservation.

"Guess he knows 'em," quoth Young. "I won't have to do any herding after all."

Editor Denies He Withheld Copy

Carl Dimond of High School Annual Disclaims Knowledge of Missing Writups.

A denial that he is withholding copy for the Register, Central High school annual, was made in writing to Principal J. G. Masters by Carl Dimond, until last Tuesday student editor of the publication.

"I have no material which belongs to the Register, and do not know where the missing senior writups are. I shall abide by the rules of the administration," is the context of Dimond's written communication, according to Masters.

Carl was in school yesterday and conferred with Prof. J. F. Woolery of the Register faculty board.

Principal Masters declared that Dimond did not strike Miss Helen Clarke, faculty sponsor of the Register, in the struggle last Tuesday.

"Dimond just tried to take some material for the Register away from her by force," Principal Masters said.
