

Cronin of O'Neill Enters Race for U.S. Marshalship

Report of Deadlock in Nebraska Delegation Over Dahlgren Successor News To Solons.

By E. C. SNYDER.
Washington Correspondent Omaha Bee. Washington, June 7.—(Special Telegram.)—In addition to "Pel" Barrows, Dennis H. Cronin of O'Neill, a member of the present state senate, has entered the race for the United States marshalship.

Barrows, according to newspaper reports, stands committed to forego his influence in the race for United States senator in order to break the deadlock now existing over the marshalship.

So far as the Nebraska delegation is concerned, it is news to the members to know that a deadlock exists over the Dahlgren succession. The members have not met because of several of the delegation being absent from the city. Congressman Reavis is expected in Washington on Thursday next, but while the First district representative is again on deck, Judge Evans is in Nebraska and does not expect to return until next week. Until the entire delegation from the Prairie state is in Washington Senator Norris will not call a meeting.

Childhood Sweethearts Meet to Wed After 40 Years

Cupid twanged his bow—and this pair, Eli Harvey, noted New York sculptor, and Miss Grace G. Harvey of Oakland, Cal., came from the extreme limits of the United States to the heart of the golden west, Omaha, to renew their romance begun in childhood days back in Cincinnati. This picture was snapped in Omaha yesterday just before they caught an early train for Windom, Minn., where magic words from the lips of Miss Harvey's brother, Rev. Frederick Harvey, will seal their romance of more than 40 years with the wedding ring.

Forty years ago, Eli Harvey and Grace G. Harvey played together as kids back in Cincinnati.

Just before Grace was 12 years old, she went to live with her aunt in California.

Eli went on through school, succumbed to the artistic temperament, went to the Academy of Fine Arts in Cincinnati, and proceeded to make himself famous as a sculptor.

Talk of Old Days.
But Cupid had nicked the two little hearts in the breasts of the Harvey children, whose names were the same but who were not even distant relatives, and yesterday—

They sat back comfortably in their seats in a thoroughly modern passenger train and talked of the old days, as the throbbing locomotive raced with them from Omaha to Windom, Minn., where magic words of Grace's brother, the Rev. Frederick Harvey, will make them man and wife today and crystallize their dream of childhood days back there in Cincinnati.

They met for the first time in more than 40 years at the Union station in Omaha, Monday night, when Miss Harvey, now little more than 50, alighted from the Overland Limited from the golden west.

They embraced in the waiting room at the station, and fled to the parlor of the Hotel Conant, there to begin the reminiscence of childhood days which was continued on the train this morning.

"Who's Who," cites Mr. Harvey as one of the most noted of modern sculptors.

He was abroad 12 years and studied under Lefevre, Constant, Doucet, Delance and Callat, the latter two at the Academie Delecluse in Paris.

He holds many medals for prize sculpture exhibited at various exhibitions.

His romance with Miss Harvey is singular.

When the little girl removed to California, the young pair became estranged, although Mr. Harvey kept up a correspondence with the aunt of his boyhood sweetheart.

Still Miss Harvey.
He married in 1893. His wife died two years ago.

With the approach of age, his mind turned to the contentment of home and reveries of his childhood.

He learned his boyhood sweetheart was doing special portrait and home photography work among the social set of Oakland.

And he learned she was still Miss Harvey.

From there Cupid worked fast. The wedding day and place was set, and to safeguard against failure of recognition in Omaha, Mr. Harvey was to wear a dark brown suit, a straw telescope hat and glasses, and Miss Harvey a long brown coat, hat of flowery trimmings and glasses also.

Mr. Harvey arrived in Omaha Monday, jealous of his secret.

The meeting was effected without mishap—but the secret leaked out. Having designed the famous Elk statue that adorns various B. P. O. E. plots in cemeteries, Mr. Harvey conferred, while in the city, with executives of the Omaha lodge with a view to placing a piece of his work at the Elks' rest in Forest Lawn cemetery.

Tecumseh Undergoing City Water Shortage

Tecumseh, Neb., June 7.—(Special Telegram.)—Tecumseh is experiencing water shortage, but there will be relief within the next 10 days. The city operates the water plant and the several wells furnishing the supply is running low. There is hardly any water in the reserve reservoirs or standpipe. To safeguard against a serious fire, arrangements have been made to pump into the mains direct from the Nemaha river drainage channel.

The contractors at work on the filtering plant, which is to furnish treated water from the channel, expect to have the new plant ready to turn over to the city in about 10 days. This plan will supply an abundance of water, it is thought, it being possible to pump 400 gallons a minute from the channel.

Land Grant Asked
Scottsbluff, Neb., June 7.—(Special Telegram.)—Scottsbluff has asked the government for a grant of land on the shores of Lake Minatare to make a permanent camping ground and picnic place, and perhaps a permanent summer colony for the boy scouts of the county.

Burglar's Tip Is Clue to Holdups Who Slew Woman

Confessed Robber Tells Police He Sold Two Revolvers to Three Men Near Riverview Park.

Joe Denny, confessed burglar, whose parole was revoked last week, told police yesterday that he sold two revolvers to three men near Riverview park shortly before he was arrested, police say. They believe these are the three men who held up Mr. and Mrs. James Kane and Mrs. C. M. Hyland at Tenth and Castelar streets Saturday night, and fired a shot which killed Mrs. Hyland.

"They told me they intended to do some stickup work," Denny stated to the police.

Dozen Tips Run Down.
A dozen tips were run down by detectives working on the case. They are now working to find the three men who bought the revolvers from Denny. These, they believe, are the guilty men.

Two suspects were arrested by Detectives A. C. Anderson, Bolar, Trapp and Munch, but were released after their movements at the hour of the shooting had been checked up.

"I think we will have the holdup men in jail within a few days," said

Chief of Detectives Van Deusen. "With six men working on the case and working hard, I think we are going to land them."

Inquest into the death of Mrs. Hyland was started yesterday afternoon at Healy's mortuary, but was continued until a later date when police expect to have more information.
