What's What

By HELEN DECIE

The affected man is rarer than the affected woman, but he makes up for the scarcity of his type by his increased absurdity. Unnatural poses, exaggerated by pictorial style of dress and artificial accents are inconsistent with good sense, and utterly opposed to the traditions of good breeding, which demand, first of all, natural and simple manners.
In the United States the affected man is more than likely to get himself up according to his idea of a London "Johnnie," either in opera dress or in horse costume, with a monocle, as out of place in his eye as the too-broad A is misplaced in his speech. When an Englishman says "exawmpel," he says it quite naturally, but the American imitator who turns "mat" into "mot" and "girls" into "gyrils" is a poor caricature. He won't utter a plain "Yes" when he can say "Rawthahl" or "Oy, quite Soal!" His compliment to a well-tailored man, "Oy, old son, ya're quite a Nut!" may well provoke the real man to retort in sterling Americanese, "And you're—another!"

Problems That Perplex

Answered by BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

In Love With a Widower.
Dear Miss Fairfax: Some months ago a woman friend died, leaving a baby. At the time she was living her husband and I were very good friends. Since her death I find that I have grown to love him very dearly. I do not know what his feelings toward me are.
I would appreciate any advice you may give as to how I might ascertain what his feelings are, as I feel that I cannot let him marry any other person until he knows how I feel.
About all you can do is to write to the man inquiring about his welfare and that of the baby. Not to show a friendly interest would be odd indeed under the circumstances. But to try to force the man to think of marriage may be revolting to his whole nature. He may still be thinking of the dead mother of his baby—as his wife.
Blue Eyes: Consult some reliable beauty parlor. The electric needle will remove superfluous hair permanently if it is done right. Depilatories will remove it temporarily. Don't resort to shaving unless your case is very bad.
R. R.: I suggest that you write to the State Historical society at Lincoln regarding the old coin.
Blue Eyes: If the boy cares for you, he will not believe lies about you.
Q. T.'s and Q. P.'s: I think your suggestion for a party is all right.
Anxieties: Thank your boy friends when they escort you home and invite them to call. Don't let them get the habit of taking you home without calling for you. Make it a "round trip." It is much more courteous to the girl, though there

Spick-and-Span Refrigerators

So far as possible refrigerators should be kept clean by preventive care. Ice should be washed before it is put into the ice compartment. Food should be put into the refrigerator in clean and usually covered dishes and should never be put in hot. Anything spilled in the refrigerator should be wiped up immediately. The contents of the refrigerator should be inspected frequently to make sure that no spoiled food is kept there.
About once a week and at a time when the refrigerator contains only a little ice it should be thoroughly cleaned. The ice and all the food should be removed. The racks should be taken out, washed in hot water containing soap or soda, rinsed and wiped dry.
If possible, the drain pipe should be removed, scrubbed inside with a long-handled spiral brush or swab and scalded. If the pipe is not removable it should nevertheless be thoroughly cleaned, for it may contain not only solid matter from the melting ice, but also slime formed in the organisms that thrive in such a dark, cool, moist place.
The small trap in the drain pipe should also be cleaned, and the drain pan should be washed and scalded. The inside of the refrigerator should be washed with hot water containing soap or soda, rinsed and dried thoroughly. A small pointed stick like a skewer should be used to clean the corners and seams.
So-called "iceless" refrigerators should be cleaned as regularly as those of the icebox type. The shelves should be washed and sunned, and, if possible, two sets of curtains should be provided so that each can be washed and sunned every other week. Food safes, bread boxes and other receptacles for food should likewise be regularly washed, scalded and aired to prevent mold and decay of their contents.
Louis Clarke and George Redick left last week on a motor trip to Pine Dale, Wyo. From there they will go on horse back to Mr. Redick's hunting lodge at Fremont Lake, Wyo.

HOLDING A HUSBAND

Adele Garrison's New Phase of Revelations of a Wife

What Dr. Pettit Declared to Madge. I waited breathlessly for Dicky's reply to Miss Foster's merry suggestion that he stroll down the moonlit beach with her, so that she could study the lighting effects, and decide whether his pulchritude matched that which she was kind enough to award to me.
I realize that ordinary courtesy forbade Dicky to do anything save accept her suggestion, and leave me to Dr. Pettit's gloomy companion. But I felt so thwarted and cheated by this interjection to my glorified evening with Dicky, that I was like a disappointed child in my hope for the impossible.
His head went up a trifle at Miss Foster's remark that "Dr. Pettit must be dying to talk to Mrs. Graham," and I fancied that I saw a quick, involuntary frown upon his face, but in the moonlight I was not certain of any expression. I felt, however, that the girl's unfortunate reference to the physician whom Dicky so detested had destroyed any chance that my husband might forget his invariable courtesy to women, and refuse her suggestion.
"We couldn't refuse first aid to a person in so serious a condition," he smiled down at Miss Foster, fell into step with her, and began the stroll down the golden moonlit beach of which he had talked so much, and which I had counted so confidently on sharing with him only.
I was too miserable, too enraged at a malevolent fate to do the obvious thing and talk gaily to Dr. Pettit while following them. My irritation unjustly included him, and it was in a chilly voice I had difficulty in controlling that I said quietly:
"Do you mind if we stay here instead of strolling?" I am really more tired than I thought."
An Astonishing Statement.
He waited to answer until Dicky and Miss Foster had strolled out of hearing. Then his words were low, vibrant with sympathy in which there was a distinct note of anger.
"More heartick, you mean," he said, tensely. "I see he is at his old tricks again, confound him!"
I drew myself up stiffly. It was one thing to admit to my own soul my disappointment in my husband, something altogether different to have it voiced by this man so antagonistic to him.

Dicky around a turn in the sand-dunes. And I suspected that he credited me with an active jealousy of Miss Foster, on his account as well as Dicky's.
He looked at me astounded. I regained my poise, casting about wildly in my mind for a suitable apology. "You mustn't mind me," I said, in a matter-of-fact way. "I am exceedingly tired tonight. We are hunting a home, you know, and I am really not quite responsible for anything I am saying. Suppose we sit in my car until the others return, and you shall tell me all about Miss Foster. Believe me, I am not unjust to her. I like her exceedingly. It is you who are likely to misjudge her."
"I suppose so." His voice was heavy, lugubrious, and for an instant I felt exceedingly sorry for him. I opened my lips to give him a word of timely warning as to the danger of repelling the impulsive western girl, then I closed them tightly. For such as Dr. Pettit, advice is useless.
The sound of gay voices approaching us made me look up quickly. Dicky and Miss Foster were coming toward us. They must have strolled but the shortest possible distance before returning. I found myself wondering whether it were Dicky or the girl who had suggested the return.

Household Hints

Serve small sausages with roast chicken to add to the flavor.
Discarded raincoats make excellent bags for the swimming tubes.
Lemons will be ripe and juicy if kept in cold water. Change water every week.
Rugs and carpets should never be hung on a line when being beaten as this weakens the threads.

"Lunch ready?"

HEINZ OVEN BAKED BEANS with Tomato Sauce

Johnny is next thing to a hurricane when he comes bursting into the house for a meal of Heinz Baked Beans. Oh, Boy! he likes them! And it's because his mother gives him nourishing food that Johnny is so husky and healthy.

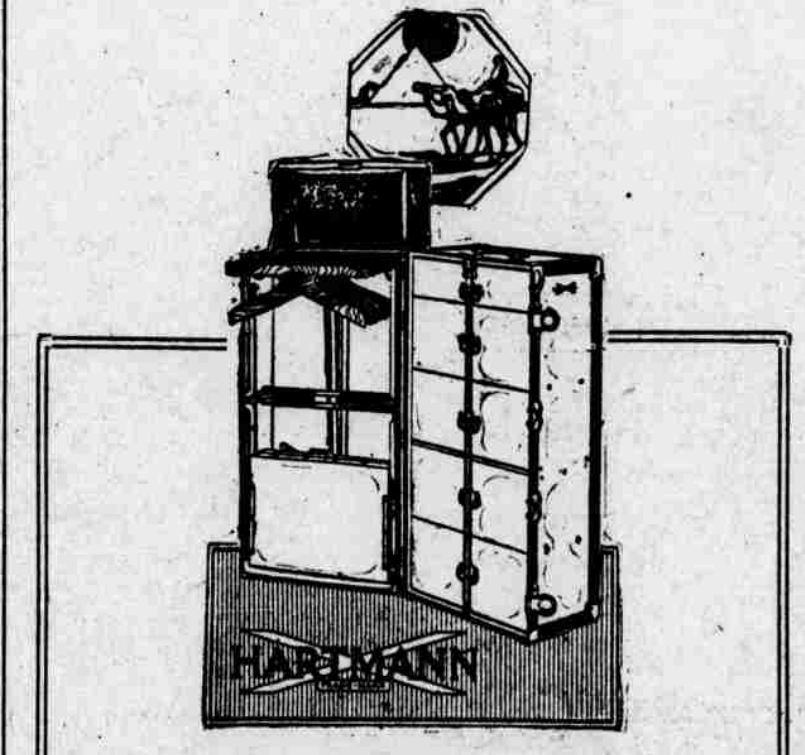

Heinz Baked Beans are as healthful and nutritious as they are good to eat. The Heinz method of oven baking by dry heat preserves their natural goodness—and Heinz famous Tomato Sauce lends a tang and flavor that give them supreme perfection.

Make Heinz Baked Beans the staple dish in your home cooking. Always keep a good supply on hand.
