

New Prohibition Commissioner to Enforce Dry Law

Efficiency to Be Watchword of Administration; Calls Upon Aid of American Citizens.

By ARTHUR BEARS HENNING. Chicago Tribune-Omaha Bee Leased Wire. Washington, June 14.—Folks—particularly those of you who have not sworn off completely and those who hope to get a beer prescription for that chronic ailment—meet your new prohibition commissioner, Mr. Roy A. Haynes, a rotund, pleasant, genial yea, jolly, little man, but earnest and conscientious, with all.

Mr. Haynes got on the job Saturday and after surveying the situation pleasantly, but formally, averred today that he intends to enforce the prohibition law to the full extent of his power and called on all citizens—drinkers as well as pro-prohibition teetotalers—to help him make the country as dry as the law contemplates.

About that little matter of medicinal prescriptions of beer, he had found on his desk some proposed regulations for the dispensation of beer for such purpose, purely tentative regulations which he would study and, after mulling his conclusions thereon, would put in final form.

Efficiency Watchword. But, if in the meantime, the commissioner added, it should appear that congress intends to pass within a reasonably short time the Volstead supplementary prohibition bill, forbidding the prescription of beer for medicinal purposes, the beer regulations will be withheld. It would be folly, likewise a cruel and unusual punishment, to start a lot of brewing and prescribing only to deprive the invalids of their medicine in the end.

Efficiency is to be the watchword of his administration, said Mr. Haynes, who thereupon proceeded to speak a little piece intended for the soulful meditation of home brewers, patrons of bootleggers and others.

"Do they intend to be lawbreakers or law-abiding citizens?" Mr. Haynes rises to inquire.

Law Should Be Enforced. "In unmistakable language America has spoken for prohibition. Federal constitutional provisions have been made for it. Laws have been enacted for its enforcement. The law should be enforced. The man or woman or agency which condones its violation; or becomes a party to its violations; or encourages a sentiment of laxity in regard to its enforcement, is helping to create, consciously or unconsciously, a very serious condition.

"At the very outset of my administration of this office, I want to preach the gospel of the need of law enforcement. If there was ever a time in the history of America when all good citizens should unite on a program for law enforcement in the home, in the schools, in the church and in the press, it is today. To 'wink at' the breaking of one law and preach the observance of another is unpatriotic and un-American. On that basis, I believe former so-called liberals will as vigorously aid in the enforcement of the dry laws as those who have always been dry. Any other policy toward law in general means chaos; means bolshevism."

Madame Curie Earns Salary of $40 a Week

Chicago, June 14.—Mme. Marie Curie, who gave to the world $16,000,000 worth of knowledge, earns a salary of $40 a week. The clothes she wears would be scorned by the ordinary woman and the wife of a plumber or restaurant keeper would not permit her servants to wear them, but today she was the center of a vast crowd of enthusiastic admirers in two great receptions—one at the Art institute and another at the railway station when she arrived.

Mme. Curie and her two daughters have been spending a week in the grand canyon of Arizona and the famous woman is highly enthusiastic over the formations and other beauties of that resort. Her daughters are in love with the United States and expressed the desire to live here forever. The party will remain here three days and numerous receptions have been planned for them.

Mrs. Orthwein Is Pictured as Heartless Vamp

Defense Tells of Her Efforts to Reform Tiegler, Who Went To Arms and Lips of "Kissing Blonde."

Chicago, June 14.—Mrs. Cora Isabelle Orthwein was today pictured by the state as a heartless vampire, who had shot Herbert P. Ziegler in the back as he was sitting down. This theory, if sustained, will shatter the claim of the defense that Ziegler had burst through the door of Mrs. Orthwein's apartment and was beating her when she shot him in self-defense.

Under rigid cross-examinations by Mrs. Orthwein's attorney, Dr. Joseph Springer, coroner's physician, admitted that the bullet had been deflected by one of Ziegler's ribs, but he maintained that the shot must have been fired into his back. This testimony is considered of the highest importance by both sides and the case appears to hang upon it.

In his opening statement Prosecutor Heth denounced Mrs. Orthwein as a scheming parasite and a remorseless vampire, who deliberately planned the death of Ziegler. He stated that Ziegler was giving her $250 a month for her support and that she had no right to lock him out of the flat.

Mrs. Orthwein sobbed softly as the prosecutor reconstructed the murder scene. Step by step he traversed the route from the Green Mill Gardens to the Rainbow Gardens and then to her apartment, where the tragedy was enacted.

"The state will prove," he shouted, "that this woman, goaded by jealousy and the fear that Ziegler was about to abandon her and return to his family, steeped herself in liquor and with the liquid fire running through her brain she sat among the jazz queens and kings of the gilded cafe and deliberately planned the killing of Herbert P. Ziegler."

Time and again she dissuaded him when he contemplated divorcing his wife. She pleaded with him to quit drinking and on the evening of the tragedy, while at her apartment, he pledged her that he had taken his last drink. Then she washed his face, combed his hair and sent him away to him. She pawned her jewels to help him when he needed money.

Pastry Cook Sues Hotel For Withholding Telegram. Lessie Grimes, a pastry cook at the Loyal hotel, sued the hotel and Houston Harper and Charles Kreef yesterday in district court for $5,000, alleging that on May 21 a telegram was delivered at the hotel notifying her of her sister's serious illness, but that it was withheld from her for 20 days and then returned to the telegraph company.

She did not learn of the telegram until notified of her sister's death by letter. She has suffered great anguish, she says, because she did not get to see her sister before she died.
