Mead Receives Good Support—Wins First Game

New Addition to Hurling Staff Allows 14 Hits—Todt Wallops Out Two Circuit Clouts.

Omaha bunched hits in the sixth inning of the first game with Tulsa yesterday afternoon and scored three runs, enough to annex the initial contest of the series by the score of 5 to 4. Mead, new addition to the local's hurling staff, allowed the Oilers 14 hits, but the Buffaloes gave him good support throughout and as a result he won his first start for the herd.

Todt, leading slugger of the Tulsa club, clouted out two home runs. It happened, however, that the circuit smashes bobbed up when the sacks were vacant.

Joplin Wins First Game From St. Joseph

St. Joseph, Mo., June 14.—With an unearned run in the first inning, Joplin won the first game of the series with St. Joseph today. After striking out two men, Hovlik walked Williams, who stole second, went to third on Crosby's bad peg and scored on Hovlik's wild pitch. Rain stopped the game at the beginning of the ninth inning.

To Hold Circuit Races At Queen City Park

Beatrice, Neb., June 14.—(Special.)—The circuit races will be held at Queen City park on June 28, 29 and 30 this year. W. A. Ransdell, manager, states that there will be 10 harness and six running races, and that a field of 125 horses will be entered for the meet. The races will be held under the auspices of the Nebraska Speed association.

Running Meet Starts At Harrington Wednesday

Harrington, Neb., June 14.—(Special.)—Twenty-three cars of horses arrived here yesterday from the Ak-Sar-Ben spring running meet at Omaha. The gallopers will be entered in the race meet to be held here this week, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday. More horses are expected today.

Babe Gathers New Batting Honors; Hits Ball 475 Feet

New honors were added to Babe Ruth's credit today by batting Dauss of Detroit for two home runs.

Besides making four home runs in two successive contests, beating his own mark of three in two games, the New York slugger hit seven home runs in five consecutive games, a new major league record. In his past five official times at bat, Ruth has gratified the expectations of the spectators with four home runs. He is now 16 days ahead of his 1920 record. Last year his 23 and 24 home runs came June 30.

Ruth's second homer today surpassed his record long distance hit of yesterday. The ball again dropped into the center field bleachers, landing a few rows farther back than yesterday's smash. The distance was estimated at 475 feet.

CHAPTER VIII.

Continuing the story of his early experiences, Jack Dempsey said:

"Jack Price and I didn't remain very long in Denver. The fistic game wasn't exceptionally good in that town early in 1916. Jack rambled around a bit and tried to get fights for me but it couldn't be done. Jack told the folks there that I could whip anybody in town—but all he got was the 'razz.'

"And so Jack came back discouraged. But we determined not to go back to Salt Lake—not right away, anyway.

"'Those birds back home know all about us being here in the east,' declared Jack. 'I told 'em about it—told 'em how we were going east and make a fortune. And if we went back now they'd give us the laugh. See? Well, they ain't going to do that—not to little Jack Dempsey or little Jackie Price, are they?'

"Oh, no—of course not," I agreed. "Of course not. But where do we go from here?"

"'I'll have to figure that out,' replied Jack. 'You excuse me a while and I'll get it all figured out by tonight and then we'll beat it somewhere.'

"And Jack, after going into executive session with himself, decided that we'd just jump aboard some train and travel a little farther east.

"'Maybe we'll meet some guys on the train that know about the fight game and they'll tip us off to some place where you can fight,' said Jack.

"Sure," I agreed. In those days I was a very agreeable fellow—especially with Jack. He was a year or two older than I was—perhaps 22 or 23—and that, of course, gave him a wider knowledge of the world's affairs. Furthermore, he was the manager, wasn't he?—and I was only a fighter—and not much of a one at that. Fighters, I supposed then, must be very agreeable with their managerial bosses.

"So we got aboard a train in Denver and headed east—and again we traveled in an upper berth because it was cheaper. The weather continued hot, the Pullman was stuffy and Jack continued to smoke. Whew! what a trip.

"Kansas City offered nothing in the way of a fight for me. Jack flipped a coin to see whether we'd go back home or continue east. He had counted the bankroll and found that we had just about enough to go either way. The coin came heads—and eastward was our way.

"We landed in Chicago and Jack tried to get a fight for me in Milwaukee. No one there had ever heard of me—and they wouldn't listen to Jack, although he shed about 10 to his 230 pounds trying to explain that I could whip anybody in Wisconsin—whip 'em all if I was properly approached.

"Now what'll we do?" I asked Jack, when he came back disgusted and discouraged. "You're the manager."

"'I'll have to figure that out,' he answered. 'You stick around here a little while and I'll figure it out.'

"Jack, as can be noted, liked to do most of his figuring in my absence. I never was sure why that was the case, but I strongly suspicion that Jack, who is a crack billiard player, needed a cue in his hand to help him figure.

"That night when Jack came back he said:

"'I've got it all figured out. We're going to New York tomorrow.'

"'New York?' I gasped. 'Whew! That's a pretty long way off, isn't it?' For New York still reckoned in my opinion as being located a 'million miles from nowhere.'

"'Yep, New York,' responded Jack. 'That's the place for us. Lots of jack (money) there for us. We won't be there a month before we'll have thousands of dollars.'

"'That'll be fine, won't it,' I commented. 'Then we can eat pie and everything, can't we?'

"'Now, you quit complainin',' said Jack. 'We ain't starving, are we, even if we can't afford pie.'

"'No, no, of course we're not,' I put in hurriedly, fearing I might have hurt Jack's feelings. 'You're managing things great, old boy. But I like pie and if we get these thousands of dollars I'm going to buy $200 worth of pie.'

"And the next day—still teaming it in an upper berth—we hit the rails for New York."
