

Dempsey Wins Early in Fourth; Carp Sprains Wrist

Frenchman Smothered by Rushes of Champion—Flooded Twice in Fatal Round.

the battle. With a menacing scowl on his dark features, he followed Carpenter about the ring as the latter side-stepped and ducked the lunges in an endeavor to corner the challenger. Croching low and with body and fists swinging from side to side he crept after Carpenter until he caught him on the ropes near a neutral corner and began the battering which presaged the end.

There was little question in the minds of the more expert among the spectators as to the ultimate outcome. Carpenter, with his speed of foot gone, confidence shaken, blood running from his nose and mouth and a rash over his cheekbone, looked like a hunted animal.

Dempsey, without mercy and like an avenging nemesis, punished Carpenter with every blow. The Frenchman, who had held his own at the end of the third round found Carpenter in a semi-helpless condition on the ropes and the gong saved him from a knockout at that point. The fourth and final round was soon over and the picture presented by Carpenter helpless on the floor and his stunned handlers in his corner was in marked contrast to the supreme air of confidence with which the challenger entered the ring.

Frenchman First in Ring. Carpenter was first to enter the 18-foot pugilistic amphitheater at 2:57 p. m. He wore a gray silk tuxedo and his white shirt knuckles bathed over his white silk trunks. He smiled and waved an air of flying overhead with the utmost nonchalance.

At 2:58 p. m. the champion followed, wearing white trunks. Manager Descamps was fussy about the bandaging on Dempsey's hands, which was twice as heavy as that of Carpenter himself, wound about his own fists; there was usual delay in the preliminaries to a championship contest and at 3:18 the gong called the men to the center of the ring for the championship battle.

Thirteen minutes later the great international match, heralded throughout the world, was over, and Carpenter was being half carried, half dragged to his corner by the police and his seconds. Helpless and groggy, and with a blood-smeared face, he did not resemble in the slightest the confident super-champion challenger of a few minutes before.

Across the ring, Jack Dempsey sat in his corner with not a mark on face or body. Francois Descamps was ministering to his crushed idol as he sobbed and chattered in French. When finally Carpenter did arise, he staggered toward the center of the ring, and the police and ring officials, seeing his condition, supported him while Dempsey sprang from his stool and running to meet his defeated opponent, grasped his hand and congratulated him on his gameness and boxing ability.

Eight Becomes Ten. A month later the principals had left the ring and the "fight of the century" had become ring history. In the short period of the contest it was shown conclusively that Carpenter in no way compared to Dempsey as a fighting machine. Courageously speedy of foot and with a lightning-like rapier blow, he proved a clever boxer with a moderate punch. Against the man-killing Dempsey all his skill faded away like fog before the sun. It was but another demonstration of the futility of cleverness when opposed to actual fighting.

Summed up in a few words, Carpenter was outclassed when Dempsey persisted in fighting inside the Frenchman's flying arms. Had he elected to try and box with Carpenter, the end might have been different. But Dempsey is a fighter and fought the only way he knows how. Against that attack Carpenter, game and skillful as he undoubtedly is, was a beaten man from the start.

After the main bout was over, the heavyweights, Billy Miske and Jack Renault, entertained the remaining spectators with an eight-round contest in which honors were even.

Omaha Minister Called From France to Princeton

The Rev. F. D. Jenkins, Son of Omaha U. Head, Gets Important Theological Post.

Frankley Jenkins

For the second time the Rev. Finley D. Jenkins, son of the Rev. D. E. Jenkins, president of the University of Omaha, has been called back from Europe to accept an important position in a theological seminary.

This time he is coming to be associated with Rev. Dr. Caspar Wistar Hodge, occupying the chair of systematic theology in Princeton Theological seminary.

This is the most commanding position in the whole field of Presbyterian education and Rev. Mr. Jenkins is by far the youngest man who ever held such a high position. He is only 26.

Wins Fellowship. When the young theologian graduated from Princeton, he won a fellowship entitling him to a year of study abroad. He went to Berlin and began his studies, but had been there only three months when he was called back to accept an important position in the Presbyterian Theological seminary at Louisville, Ky., which position had been declined by his father.

About six weeks ago, after a visit at his home, 1921 Binney street, he departed for Strassburg, France, for a year's study in the great university there.

Called to New Post. He had been in Strassburg less than two weeks when the call to his new post came to him. It is such a lofty position in the sphere of Presbyterian theological education that it could not be declined and the young minister will return to this country and assume the important place.

Flyers Will Bomb Replica of French Town at Air Meet

Former Fighting Flyers of International Repute to Gather at World Congress in Omaha Nov. 3-5.

Today Omaha is known nationally as an air center, although aviation is in its infancy. The exploits of the air mail pilots flying out of here and those of private flyers have attracted attention. When the International Aero congress has come to a successful conclusion November 6, Omaha will have an international reputation as an air center.

Plans are all completed for the first International Air Congress and Reunion of Aviators to be held in Omaha November 3-5. The men in charge have $27,000 already subscribed to a $30,000 fund which will be needed to put the big congress over.

Forty-Eight American Aces. The 48 American aces have been asked to attend, as well as all men winning the distinguished service cross.

During the reunion, an organization of all former aviators will be completed. It will correspond with the American Legion and other patriotic bodies composed of former soldiers, sailors and marines.

The big air congress will attract aviators of national and international fame. Exhibitions of the latest aerial equipment will be shown and prizes will be offered in various flying events as well as to enter exhibits for the big exposition and display of aerial equipment which will require three huge circus tents to house.

Aerial Pageant. One of the features will be an aerial pageant prepared by Rupert Hughes and Eddie Deeds. A replica of a French village, with church and market place, etc., will be built on the aviation field. Then under the glare of an 80,000,000 candle power search light to be furnished by the General Electric company, the night attack on the village by German airplanes will be staged.

The German planes will bomb the village and practically destroy it. The village will be saved from utter annihilation by Yank planes which will engage the Germans and finally drop them. The pageant will require a cast of 100 men and women. Among the distinguished visitors invited to attend are President Harding, Marshal Foch, Sir Douglas Haig and a host of others who won fame in the world war.

They are expected to attend, as they are to be in Kansas City a few days previously attending the American Legion convention in that city.

In connection with the air congress and reunion there will be numerous public and social entertainments for the thousands of guests of Omaha during the three days.

What the Aero club of Omaha will attempt to do as the result of the air congress will be to establish Omaha as an air center. The club will attempt to bring manufacturers of planes and equipment. One plane factory has already announced Omaha as its headquarters. It is the Bellanca company, manufacturers of a monoplane.

Financed by Public. The financing of the meet will be by the public. In the near future a campaign for finances will be started. A board of governors, composed of leading Omaha citizens and business men has agreed to underwrite the proposition. The board members are: Earl W. Porter, Aero club; Earl Allen, Darlow Advertising company; J. L. Baker, Baker Ice Machine company; L. W. R. Beatty, Beatty caterers; W. B. T. Belt, president Nebraska Bell Telephone company; E. B. Brandeis, J. L. Brandeis & Sons; Everett Bunting, Union Stock Yards company; Harley Conant, president Omaha Hotel Men's association; C. E. Corey, Corey & McKenzie Printing company; Victor H. Crandall, Sinclair Refining company; W. B. Drake, Drake Realty Construction company; A. W. Dresler, Dresler Brothers; H. H. Fish, Western Newspaper Union; Carl Gray, president Union Pacific; W. W. Head, president Omaha National bank; M. P. Hinchey, president Omaha Launderers' club; Willard D. Hosiord, John Deere Plow company; I. A. Medlar Printing company; L. C. Turner, Refinec company; and C. M. Wilhelm, Orchard-Wilhelm company.

The Aero club hopes to establish a municipal flying field for Omaha from the proceeds of the meet.
