The principal events of this important day, however, occurred not in London, but in Dublin, and the most striking was the sensational appearance of Gen. Sir Nevil Mac-Ready, the military commander in Ireland at the conference of Eamonn de Valera and leading southern unionists, after his aide-de-camp had been sent in advance, presumably to ascertain whether his participation would be agreeable.

General MacReady's appearance and long stay at the conference clearly had to do with Mr. Lloyd George's letter to Earl Midleton, one of the conferees, in which the prime minister declared that it would he impossible to conduct negotiations with any hope of achieving satisfactory results if violence in Ireland continued and also that the British ge ment would give instructions to troops and police to suspend active operations the moment Mr. De Valera declared his intention to enter into conference with the British government and to order the cessation of all acts of violence by those under his control.

Meeting Is Secret.

No report of the proceedings o Mr. De Valera's conference with the southern unionists has yet been issued, but it is believed that the principal topic discussed was a truce and that Eamonn Dagan, a Sinn Fein member of parliament who was released from Mount Joy prison only a few days ago, acted as intermedi-ary between the conference and the Sinn Fein leaders.

For the Whole Family

The Bee for next Sunday will be chock full of a variety of entertaining features that assure interesting Sunday reading for every member of the family. Look these over:

"Miss Mary Smith," a Blue Ribbon short story of rapid fire romance, by Elizabeth Jordan.

"The Bogie of Fear," second installment of the thrilling Arthur Somers Roche serial.

"The Bloodstained Poker," another of the series of gripping realistic reports of solutions of "The World's Greatest Detective Cases.

"The Married Life of Helen and Warren," by Mabel Herbert Urner.

"Young Lochinvar," as cast for a movie scenario by Montague. Remember, too, there's a remarkably complete woman's section, prepared by women writers and presenting news for women in the way women like to have it presented. A special page for the children and pages covering, "like a blanket," the whole field of sport news and features.

"Harvest Time in Nebraska Wheat Fields." Creighton commencement photos and an especially good page of pictures of movie stars are offered in next Sunday's Rotogravure section.
