

Bridesmaids' Gowns

By MERCEDES DEVRIES-SCHMIT.

International News Service. And now let us forget—for a short while, of course—our little prospective bride. We must today turn our attention to the sweet girl who is to play the second role in this wonderful wedding ceremony—the bridesmaid. How happy she is! Yet her task is a pretty hard one. She must, of course, look charming, attractive, but mind you, not too attractive. Her toilet must be lovely, so as to be part of the picture, but as inconspicuous as possible under the circumstances. She must be tactful and remember that the bride is—and must be—the star of the romantic performance.

The Hat Is Taffeta. The hat to go with this gown must, of course, be of the same taffeta. A garland of small roses encircles the low crown and in the back there is a rather wide bow of silver ribbon with long streamers. What could be prettier than this other model boasting a pale blue satin foundation and an overdress of pale lavender chiffon? The underskirt is quite plain, straight, although not tight; the overskirt made of tier upon tier of ruffles, each curving upward on the sides and ending in a quaint little bouquet. A tiny garland of these same miniature flowers encircles the waist and trims all the edges.

Of Pale Green. Another charming model is fashioned of pale green taffeta and white net. It is exceedingly simple in line, the taffeta foundation being cut chemise style, while the net overdress reminds one of the models worn by the Victorian belles. The taffeta bodice is snug, with quaint little tucked and puffed sleeves of net. The bodice and underskirt are of crepe de chine, while the three wide flounces of the skirt and the tiny puff sleeves are of silver lace. Each flounce edged with a narrow ruche of natter blue velvet ribbon. The waist is encircled by a garland of roses made of old ivory chiffon.

A Taffeta Cape. To wear to and from the party a smart cape of taffeta is made with three crisp flounces. The deep yoke fits the shoulders snugly. A tiny garland of pale pink mousseline de soie over yellow. The tint thus achieved by this alliance is simply exquisite. This novel cape fastens all the way down the front, with flat bows of green velvet ribbon.

Very chic this frock composed of a mélange of rose crepe de chine and silver lace. The bodice and underskirt are of crepe de chine, while the three wide flounces of the skirt and the tiny puff sleeves are of silver lace. Each flounce edged with a narrow ruche of natter blue velvet ribbon. The waist is encircled by a garland of roses made of old ivory chiffon.

Problems That Perplex

Answered by BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

Politeness Always in Order. Dear Miss Fairfax: I am a daily reader of your lovelorn column and think your advice is splendid. I am a Junior in High School. Would you please tell me what a girl should tell a boy after he has taken her home from a party or a dance? Is it proper to ask him to call again? If so, what should she say? Would you please print my letter with your answer. Sincerely, "BROWNIE."

Never be afraid to be polite. It is always good form to thank anyone for kindness he has shown you. If a boy is good enough to escort you home from a party, by all means thank him for the courtesy. Invite him to call again if you wish him to do so. It is preferable to have your mother invite him to call. If he has not met your mother, tell him you would be glad to have him call and meet her.

Miss Ambitions: According to character analysts, coarse hair denotes something of coarseness in one's makeup. It may be offset by a fine textured skin, and it may mean nothing more coarse than a lack of extreme sensitiveness to one's surroundings. A person's physical characteristics are so closely related that only with all them in mind, can absolute judgment be given. If you are interested enough, send me a stamped addressed envelope, and I will tell you where you can get a complete analysis of yourself, and at what cost. (What do you mean by a "little chin"? A receding chin is one thing, and a little chin, another.)

Blue Eyes: So many girls seem to think that they are dictators over the actions of the boys who like them. They learn from experience that they are not. Because a boy likes you, you must not expect to have the right to tell him he shall not go with this or that girl. That is taking his independence away from him. The case would be different if you were engaged to marry him, but I take it you are not. Don't encourage such a feeling. Accept this boy's friendship if you value it. If he asks for your opinions on any subject, including this other girl, tell him honestly and fairly what you think. But do not consider that his regard for you should give you the right to regulate his other friendships.

Pat the Scot: I believe you are sincere all right in caring for the girl. I am glad you wrote me, because I think you need to have someone tell you that self-control is the greatest lesson we have to learn in life. We all feel keenly the absence of our loved ones, but the weaking gives way to despair when a friend leaves him for a few weeks. Use the United States mails and let your friendship continue that way, but don't let the girl lose respect for you by discovering that you have no balance or sense.

Chums: It is difficult to suggest an appropriate name for a club without knowing anything about the purposes of the organization. "Octalette" suggest both eight and youth. You could find in the library some attractive Indian words from various languages of the red man. Books on ethnology (the librarian will help you) give the words and their meanings.

Pineapple-Strawberry. Housewives unknowingly have assumed the role of Dan Cupid to the surprise of Miss Strawberry of New Jersey and Mr. Pineapple of Florida, visitors in the local fruit market. The romance was the result of the desire of housewives for pineapples and strawberry preserves, so when the two fruits began to appear so plentifully on the stands together the match-making housewives decided they would make perfect mates.

This is the way the romance developed: Put the pineapple through a grinder. Mash berries. To every two cups of strawberries take a cup of pineapple. Use a cup of sugar to each cup of fruit. Cook until thick enough to spread. Put in glasses and cover with melted paraffin. This does not require any sealing.

Russian Prune Pudding. Soak half a pound of prunes over night and in the morning turn all into the upper part of the double boiler and simmer until nearly tender. Sweeten to taste during the last 10 minutes of cooking. Cool and remove the pits. To the syrup add a tablespoonful of gelatin which has been soaked in a quarter of a cupful of cold water and then dissolved over hot water. Mould the cooked prunes and split blanched almonds with the assistance of the jellied syrup, and be sure that each layer of the fruit and nuts is perfectly firm before the next is added. Chill on the ice and serve unmoulded with sweetened whipped cream or a custard sauce.
