Van Sant Placement Bureau Shows Demand For Trained Employes

We all know the business history of the past year and what it has meant to employers and employed. But let us not close our eyes to facts on the optimistic side, such as these:

The records of the Van Sant bureau show that even in the dullest months of the past year it has aver aged two calls daily for permanent office workers. The best months averaged about four calls daily. This does not take into consideration calls students enrolled in the Y. M. C. ## Small Classes Solve Problem

Omaha Institution Plans to Assist Backward and Shy Pupils by Individual Attention.

Are the parents of Omaha perplexed about the selection of a school for their childen in September? Do your boys and girls require a tutor to "keep up" in class? Do they learn how to study? At the School of Individual Instruction, 3507 Harpart of the country and is attracting cedented character of the past year, ney street, these problems are all solved. This institution is a nonsectarian school for boys and girls the courses offered last year, a course in calls business schools must have play periods, luncheon service and proper individual attention.

That the restriction in the number of pupils in a class be made small as convenient, is an established factor in the education of the child. At the School of Individual Instruction the classes never contain over 10 pupils. The conclusion is logical that children can grasp more in a class of ment, young men and women will this size than they can in a class readily recognize that with increasingly better conditions ahead they cannot make a better investment of time and money than in securing the training which will increase a well-bail to the size of the securing the training which will increase a well-bail to the securing the training which will increase a well-bail to the securing the training which will increase a well-bail to the securing the training which will increase a well-bail to the securing the s training which will insure a well-paid has made bright and energetic stu-position for them and a competent dents out of what appeared to be dull worker for some employer of the children.

"Every child recites every day," is the motto of the school. The curriculum for the year includes first and second years of high school, grammar, primary and kindergarten

You who are graduating from High School or Prep School-toward what goal does your ambition point? Do you lean toward a career in business or in one of the professions? Is it your intention to become an educator, a scientist, an agricultural expert? Do you plan to prepare yourself for the strenuous battle of life by thorough special training in any line? There has never been a time when such training was more essential, when its advantages were more apparent. We live in an era of transition and adjustment; in a world new-born after the cataclysm. Profound changes have been wrought. Trying times, and times of glorious opportunity, are just ahead. The University trained man or woman will approach these trials, these opportunities, equipped with sound training and sure knowledge. And in comparison with these advantages, the time, the effort, the money involved in securing such training will count as little. Your State University, time-honored and hallowed in tradition, offers a well-rounded education in your chosen vocation, together with a host of pleasant and worth while activities for your leisure hours. A comprehensive curriculum, an unexcelled corps of professors and instructors; athletics, debating societies; music, dramatics-all these await you

Especially interesting to you will be the literature describing the University and its manifold activities, which is now ready for distribution to 1921 Seniors. Send for your copy. It will be of help to you in making your plans for the future.
