City to Provide House in Which Water and Stoves For Cooking Will Be Installed.

Tourists coming into Omaha for a few days' stop are to have a new camp site, according to W. B. Check, president of the Omaha Automobile club, who with a committee of other members of the club called on Park Commissioner Hummel yesterday afternoon and made complete plans for the new site.

The new site is to be in the southeast corner of Elmwood park. It will be 150 feet by 300, divided into spaces of 20 feet by 20, accommodating about 300 persons.

Shower Baths Promised. Commissioner Hummel has promised to build a house on the site which will contain water and stoves for cooking. At Scott of the Scott Auto Tourists' store has promised to install shower baths.

The new site will be a great improvement over the old which was located in a hollow at Elmwood and was without water, cooking or sanitary facilities. In fact the old site was so bad that many tourists refused to stop there.

The disadvantages of the place did not deter several families living in the city from going there and camping indefinitely, according to President Check, to reduce rent expenses. To prevent anything like this in the future all visitors to the tourists camp will be registered and will have the privilege of remaining at the camp two weeks. If they care to stay longer than that they will be compelled to re-register.

20,000 Tourists Annually. Omaha has 20,000 auto tourists annually and the long felt need of a new camp site was recognized by Commissioner Hummel who has promised to do all within his limited powers to make the camp site worthy of Omaha.

The committee that arranged for the new camp site was composed of W. B. Check, president of the Omaha Automobile club; J. E. George, J. S. White and J. H. Richards of the Scott Tourists Store.

Girls can't do things better than boys can. At least it's the firm belief of Henry Schmidt, 7-year-old, kindergarten, living at 1023 North Eighteenth street, that they can't.

"Pooh, I can do better than that," quoth Master Henry, with true masculine superiority, when he read in The Bee that four Blaire little girls had raised $4 for The Bee's milk and ice fund, by running a pop and lemonade stand.

Fistful of Pennies. He went to his father with his plans. "Dad, will you rig me up a pop stand?" Interested father did. The pop stand opened Saturday morning on the lawn of the Schmidt home.

In less than three hours Henry had a whole fistful of coins, pennies, nickels, dimes and quarters, aggregating $2.

Henry hurried to The Bee office with his precious proceeds. "I'll do much better this afternoon, business is generally slow in the mornings," he explained.

Youth on Outing Drowned in Lake West of Tekamah

Reuben Anderson, 17, Loses Life on Way to Camp With Companions for Week's Vacation.

A week's vacation trip of fishing and boating, the object of carefully laid plans of five Omaha boys, came to a sad ending on its first day, Sunday, when one of their number lost his life when the boat in which he and the other members of the expedition were rowing, turned turtle.

The fatal ending to the outing came late Sunday afternoon, according to word received by the parents of the youth, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Anderson, 1019 South Twenty-sixth street.

The car was well stocked with provisions, fishing tackle and camping apparatuses, necessary to the proper spending of a week's vacation trip. A large lake 15 miles northwest of Tekamah, was the objective of the boys.

According to the meager information received in Omaha by the parents of the drowned youth, the party was crossing the lake preparatory to setting up tent and arranging their camp. It was while they were crossing the lake that their boat overturned, throwing all of the boys and their camping paraphernalia into the water.

All of the boys were expert swimmers and all managed to escape but Reuben, and his companions and his parents are unable to explain his drowning.

The boys summoned help in an effort to rescue their chum, but this was unavailing. The lake was dragged all night for the body, but it was not recovered until early yesterday morning. The boy's mother is prostrated.

The boy's father left for Tekamah Sunday night as soon as he was informed of his son's death and brought back the body late yesterday. Reuben had been employed as delivery boy for the Pantorium.
