Direct Marketing of FURS. Aulabaugh maintains his own trading posts in Northern Canada, buying all the raw skins that the Indians in his territory trap each winter. Mr. Aulabaugh personally goes north every spring and selects the best of all the skins for his retail stores. These skins are specially tanned. The rest of the skins go to Eastern cities where they are sold at auction. This method of buying gives Aulabaugh a much better selection at a much lower price than the usual method of big fur traders of buying at auction.
