Leviathan, Taken From Germany, Costs More to Operate Than Returns From Freight Yield.

By HOLLAND.

Many of the visitors who are spending a part of the summer in New York City appear to take great interest in the steamship Leviathan. They frequently spend half a day in crossing the Hudson to Hoboken, so that they may get a near view of this stupendous oceangoing vessel. They seem to be more interested in her size than in the fact that it is costing the government a great deal of money to keep her in good condition. This steamship justifies the curiosity which she has stimulated. It has Crete Liquor Vendors some characteristics of the sentimen-Crete. Now this appropriately named Leviathan is the possession of the United States government and one of the ablest of the steamship managers said that "the government had an elephant on its hands "Private capital might be persuaded to hay it, but it would probably cost at least $12,800,000$. Experienced steamship managers say, however, that it will never be used exclusively for passenger and freight across the ocean. Possibly if her equinment was so changed that she became an oll burner she might be operated at a profit, although that is doubtful.

Last of a Type.

Probably the Leviathan, whether she is put in service or salvaged, even sent to scrap heap, will pas into tradition as the last of the enormous atcamers of which the Great Eastern many years ago was the protagonist. Not again will the steamship companies build vessels of the enormous size and the tonnage capacity which are characteristic of the Leviathan. For it has been discovered that the smaller vessels are the profit earners, partly because the construction of them entails only reasonable capital investment and again because of the great economy secured in their operation. At present Mr. Lasker is concerned about the disposal of the ships which were built in war days for the government apid also about the best method of writing off the enormous deficit which where age in will be necessary for the government is write off this cost, charging it to the expenses imperatively entailed by our participation in the European war.

But here are the ships. Many of them could be put to good use. They may be of excellent service in maintaining and intress, but it is regarded as beyond question that if such use is to be made of them the government nust keep its hands off, permitting private capital completely to over and also to operate these vessels.
