Figures Show Improvement In Employment Situation; Wages In Most Lines Show Decrease.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 8 .- Industrial employment conditions in the United States are not yet on a pre-war basis, but they are working

Although nearly three years have passed since the world war armistice, American industry is still struggling to get back to a normal condition wherein factories boomed and there was plenty of work for all.

Statistics for 13 selected manufacturing industries and in bituminous coal mining show that in June of this year there was decreased employment in all lines except in the wool industry, as compared with June, 1920. There was in the woolen industry an increase of 3.9 per cent in the number of persons employed in June, 1921, over June, 1920.

The most important decreases in employment shown by these comparative figures were 4.6 per cent in car building and repairing, 39.6 per cent in iron and steel, and 37.5 per cent in automobiles. Compared with June, 1920, the amount of the pay rolls in June, 1921, shows decreases in 13 of the 14 industries. The one increase reported in Marsden's accustomed way.
