A SUMMERTIME filled with a number of unusually interesting experiences belongs to Miss Elise West, who is studying in New York this season. Last Sunday afternoon Miss West was the guest of Ty Cobb, baseball star and manager of the Detroit Tigers, in his box at the New York Polo grounds. On the Sunday previous at the Polo grounds she saw the "Home Run King," Babe Ruth, in action. Miss West has always been a baseball fan, but her experiences of this summer are making her more enthusiastic than ever.

By CORINNE LOWE.

New York.—(Special Correspondence.)—From the way in which she holds her implements we doubt much if she knows how to serve—anything but a correct sports costume. However, this talent should not be disparaged by anybody when it presents to us this charming combination of white tussah and blue and white knitted silk.
The latter in check design forms the jacket and the border of the frock. The frock is the simplest of one-piece models made with extremely short sleeves.
Along with the sleeveless one-piece frocks which have been so active this summer I noted the jumper overblouse. This garment provides sleeves and often vestee of contrasting color, and a review of models like this reveals such interesting combinations as a black satin jumper with sleeves of bisque georgette and a blue satin one with sleeves of tan chiffon.

You Blessed Girl!
It would be a strange woman indeed, I fancy, who could not comprehend how I thrilled with sympathy, which held in it something of maternal, possessive and protecting.

Problems That Perplex
Answered by BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

The Sign of the Red Bow.
Dear Miss Fairfax: I would like to ask a few questions, if you please.

1. What's the sign when a boy takes a red bow which you have fastened in your hair with a hair pin? Is there any?

2. Is it all right for a girl, 14, to write friendly letters to a sailor when he is away, providing the girl's parents see them?

3. Is it all right to go to a neighboring show with friends?

Thanking you in advance, I remain, Sincerely yours, L.E. DAVID.

1. It's a sign the boy is a tease.

2. Yes.

3. Yes.

End: I would approve of your waiting two years to marry. You will be young then, but if your love has stood the test and the young man has saved his money and is prepared for the responsibility and your parents approve, I could hardly find good objections, could I?

"Make Believe": I am sure you haven't told me all your story. The facts as you give them to me are briefly: A man you love went with you, then with another girl, and now wants to go with you again. Seems to me I would let him. If, in slipping around, the man has lied to you and misled you, that would make my change my answer. In other words, my answer depends upon whether he is an unprincipled flirt or one of the many good but changeable persons in this world. You are in a better position to judge his motives and his worth than I am with the meager facts you have given me.

Constance: Don't you listen to the foolish words of your girl friends. Why should you stop going with the man you love and intend to marry just because he hasn't given you a ring? Develop a little backbone and judge your fiancé by his real character and worth rather than by his gifts. A book would be an appropriate gift for his birthday.

Would Know: Under the new law a girl is not of age until she is 21 and the father will need her parents' consent to her marriage up to that time.

Brownie: It seems to me that twice a week is not too much for you to go with boys, provided they are good boys and your mother approves. Don't worry about being polite with boys who don't behave themselves. The most effective thing to do is to avoid their company altogether. A kiss is not an evil thing, but if carelessly and promiscuously given it makes a girl cheap and common. If it is late when you arrive home, the young man should not stay at all. He should say good night and go. Whether it is good to have many or only a few friends depends upon the friends. You cannot have too many good friends.

Just a Girl: I do not undertake to find friends for boys and girls because I would not want to recommend people to each other whom I do not know. There are organizations in the city, like the Big Sisters, who are deeply interested in "just girls." If you want to communicate with them send me self-addressed and stamped envelope and I will send you the names of some of their officers whom you can see.

Jerry: I cannot give medical advice. Better see a doctor about the breaking-out.

Your weight is not too much for your height.

Ear plugs are going out of style.

The best advice I can give you in a few words for overcoming self-consciousness in public is "forget yourself." Do not only that, but think about others. Exhibit an interest in others. Ask them questions about what they are doing and enjoying. You will find people are always glad to tell you about themselves. Don't be hypocritical about it. Only ask what truly interests you. Listen to the replies and try to understand intelligently and sympathetically. If you really do this, people will think you "perfectly charming."

Discolored or Freckled Skin Easily Peeled Off

The freckling, discoloring or roughening to which most skins are subject at this season, may readily be gotten rid of. Mercolized wax, spread lightly over the face before retiring and removed in the morning with soap and water, completely removes the discolored skin. Get an ounce of the wax at any drug store. There is no more effective way of banishing tan, freckles or other unsightly defects. Little skin particles come off each day, so the process itself doesn't even temporarily mar the complexion, and one soon acquires a brand new, spotless, girlishly beautiful face.

Wrinkles caused by weather, worry or illness, are best treated by a simple solution of powdered salicylic acid, one ounce, dissolved in one-half pint with basal. Bathing the face in this produces a truly marvelous transformation.

HOLDING A HUSBAND

Adele Garrison's New Phase of "Revelations of a Wife"

The Way Madge Rose to Meet Dicky's Need.

I do not know how other wives react toward the different moods of their husbands, but the most clutching, the most pervasive of Dicky's many appeals to me is the one I have most rarely known in him, when he needs comfort and turns to me for it.

I have seen tears in Dicky's eyes before. Highly strung as he is, I have seen him wipe his eyes at a particularly affecting bit of a powerful play or some similar appeal. But these tears were far different from the ones which I now felt against my throat, where Dicky had buried his head. Never before had any trouble of his own been strong enough to extract the tribute of tears from him, and though I knew that he was bitterly ashamed of his weakness, yet I also knew from the clinging class of his arms, such as a hurt child might give to its mother, that I could comfort him.

"You Blessed Girl!"
It would be a strange woman indeed, I fancy, who could not comprehend how I thrilled with sympathy, which held in it something of maternal, possessive and protecting.

Dicky's voice was tremulous with feeling as he raised his head and gazed up at me with eyes holding such loving admiration that I had to turn away my own in flushing embarrassment.

"If anybody else in the world but you had seen me do that I should have died," he said extravagantly, and my heart thrilled selfishly enough with the knowledge that he had not even included his mother in his statement.

"You must think me an awful ass," he went on deprecatingly, "whining like a whipped puppy, but this thing struck me between the eyes, and—"

"Stop talking that way?" I said indignantly. "You never whined in your life, and you aren't doing it now. And you don't know how wonderful it is to me that you let me share your troubles—"

"Share 'em!" he ejaculated. "That's a nice, kind, polite way to put it. I simply dump 'em all in your lap, including myself, and hang on you as Junior might. Yes, I share 'em all right, only you have the lion's share. But, oh, girl, I don't know what I'm going to do about this!"

His voice was despondent again, and I saw that the news of the rejection of his drawings for Pennington's novel, which he had just received in Marsden's letter, had, indeed, to use his own words, "struck him between the eyes," and that something must be done and that speedily, to reassure him.

For Dicky has the failing common to many persons, possessing the much abused artistic temperament, of being unable to do good work, under adverse criticism. He has a high and rigid standard of his own, to which all his work must conform. I have seen him tear up many a drawing which to my eyes appeared perfect, but which failed to satisfy him in some minor particular. But if he evolved an idea that some one to whom his work was to be submitted did not look with enthusiasm upon his ability, and his
