Bridge Benefit at Country Home of Mrs. Reed

Mrs. A. L. Reed will open her beautiful country home, "Aloha," across from the Country club, for a large benefit bridge party for the Women's Overseas Service League, Marion Crandall unit, Friday afternoon, August 26.

Proctors will be used to provide smokes and dainties for ex-service men in local hospitals.

Mrs. Reed, with Mrs. Charles T. Kountze and Miss Gladys Peters, are honorary members of the Overseas Girls' club. Mrs. Reed's daughters, Mrs. Isaac Carpenter and Miss Peggy Reed, will assist.

Miss Frances Nieman, who is chairman of the courtesies committee, will head the committee in charge of the bridge party. Assisting her will be Misses Ethel Fullaway, Marie Matthews, Edith Dahlstrom, Elizabeth Steward and Mesdames H. H. Abbott, Arthur Scribner and Newman Benson.

Handsome prizes will be awarded and refreshments served. About 35 tables will be placed for the game. Tickets are $1.

Plans for the benefit were completed at a meeting of the executive committee last evening at the home of the president, Miss Helen Cornell. Mrs. Agnes Mathiesen Halam was made chairman of the membership committee, with Misses Cassie Bierman and Harriet Ball assisting. Miss Patricia Naughtin was named chairman of the service committee, with Misses Mary MacIntosh, Eva O'Sullivan and Marie Mackin as assistants.

Entertains at Luncheon

Mrs. Palmer Findley entertained at a luncheon of 12 covers, Thursday at Happy Hollow club. The out-of-town guests at the affair were Mrs. Roger Vaughn of Chicago and Mrs. E. F. Bartlett of Rockford, Ill., who are visiting at the J. P. Lord home; Miss Elizabeth Schrock of Wabash, Ind., who is the guest of her brother here; Dr. R. D. Schrock, and Miss Elizabeth George of Galesburg, Ill., who is visiting at the J. E. George residence.

Delta Gamma Luncheon

Members of Delta Gamma will entertain at luncheon at Happy Hollow club, Friday. Covers will be laid for 20 guests. Among the Lincoln members who will motor here for the affair are Mrs. Lynn Lloyd, Mrs. A. C. Lau, Mrs. Clarence Hines, Mrs. Louise Kormeyer, Marguerite Klinker, Leilabeth Farrell and Susannah Jobst.

Return from Motor Trip

Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Brogan and Miss Daisy Doane have returned from a motor trip to Wisconsin. They left Omaha July 12 and arrived home Saturday, Miss Doane preceding them by rail from Chicago.

Mrs. Brogan reports a delightful trip back, commenting especially on beautiful country between Cedar Rapids and Des Moines, Ia. It is rolling and wooded, having splendid crops, she says.

Plan Trip to California

Mr. and Mrs. M. M. Robertson and daughter, Miss Elizabeth, leave August 20 for a trip through Canada. They will stop at Lake Louise and Banff, later going to Seattle. From Seattle they plan to motor to Los Angeles. They will spend the winter in Hollywood, returning to Omaha May 1.

For Mrs. Crandall

Complimentarily to Mrs. L. A. Crandall of Lincoln, who is her guest, Miss Lorna McMartin will entertain informally at luncheon Saturday.

Miss Katherine Lineberg will give a small luncheon at the Athletic club Friday, for Mrs. Crandall.

Extension Society

A meeting of the Extension Society will be held at the home of Mrs. G. H. Kohler, 1458 Wirt street, Friday afternoon.

How You Can Make Hairs Quickly Disappear

(Helps to Beauty.)

Even a stubborn growth of hair will quickly vanish from the face, neck or arms after a single treatment with delatone. To remove hair from arms, neck or face make a stiff paste with a little powdered delatone and water, apply to hairy surface and after about two minutes rub off, wash the skin and it will be left free from hair or blemish. To avoid disappointment, be quite certain you get real delatone and mix fresh.

DOCHERTY DEEP-ETCH CUTS

What's What

By HELEN DECIE

In some sections of the United States school boards have been so wise as to introduce the teaching of manners as part of the public school course of studies. This innovation will be welcomed most of all by the teachers themselves, who are so often victims of their pupils' rudeness.

A teacher complained recently to "What's What" of one disrespectful practice followed by many high school boys and girls of the well-to-do class; that is, shouting to the teacher when she is walking on the pavement and they are passing her in an automobile. She says that, not content with waving their arms wildly to attract her attention, they shout her name so that every passer-by can hear their shrill screams:

"Hey, Miss Simpson; Hello, Miss Simpson."

These are not "poor little children," but almost grown-up sons and daughters of parents in comfortable circumstances. Should they not be supposed to have had sufficient home training to restrain them from shrieking names in a street greeting to their superiors—or even to their equals?

HOLDING A HUSBAND

Adele Garrison's New Phase of "Revelations of a Wife"

The Fear from Which Madge Shrunk

The comment Dicky had made concerning the impossibility of Grace Draper posing for him, with my father, Lillian and Hugh Grant-lace "on the job," was one that troubled me also. That these three, together with Allen Drake—and Harry Underwood, if Grace Draper was to be believed—were keeping close watch upon her movements, had been demonstrated ever since she was released from prison. The task of eluding them would not be easy, and yet I resolved to try.

"Let satisfying or eluding those people be my job," I said quietly to Dicky, in answer to his protest. "And—will you write to her, or—shall I?"

He stared at me in amazement, in which I saw there was a distinctly resentful tinge.

"How do you know where to write her?" he asked suspiciously. "I thought we agreed when you showed me that letter from her down south that you wouldn't answer it until I had given you my decision about it. I know I should have spoken to you about that long ago, but, honestly, it slipped my mind."

My heart gave the same thrill of relief and happiness it had given when Dicky evinced his complete forgetfulness of the draperies which Grace Draper's fingers had embroidered for him. If things concerning her continually slipped his mind instead of obsessing it, then, indeed, was I safe in permitting her to serve as his model again.

"I didn't answer it," I protested. "But—I have a little confession to make to you, nevertheless, about Grace Draper."

He looked at me sharply.

"Shoot," he said, with apparent nonchalance, but I knew that he, in reality, was all attention.

"In the first place," I began, determined to clear myself of the imputation that I had broken faith with him over Grace Draper's appeal, "I tried to tell you of this the morning I left Marvin, but you would not listen to me."

"That's right!" he exclaimed. "You did try to spout something, and I put the kibosh on it. Well, now, your Puritan conscience is absolved, so go ahead with your story."

"She Told Me as Much"

How his volatile spirits had risen at the mere prospect of getting Grace Draper back as a model! If I had not realized how strictly professional his need of her was I am afraid my old jealousy of the girl would have flamed into life. But with this knowledge comforting me, I was able to proceed sedately with the story of my trip to Hempstead on the lure of the house to let set forth by Grace Draper.

I related every incident of the interview, even to her naming of the four persons who, she said, were not especially care for enthusiastic comments upon Grace Draper's mentality.

"Then that's all right," Dicky said slowly. He rose abruptly as he spoke, jumped from the car, and began to stride rapidly upon the top of the hill where we had stopped. I knew that he was thrashing out with himself the advisability of bringing Grace Draper back into his life again, and I had hard work to keep from crying out to him that I could not bear it—that there must be some other way out.

A sudden paralyzing thought struck me. I remembered that Lillian adroitly had armed my father with the story of that attempt on my life which Grace Draper had made in the first year of my marriage, when she had seized my foot while swimming, and had tried to pull me down into the undertow. Lillian had done this, I knew, so that Dicky could be told of that long-ago happening which I had determined never to reveal.

Had my father told Dicky? With that knowledge of her hatred of me, was Dicky willing to chance her repentance and risk that hatred again for the sake of his career?

I had no means of knowing the truth, and I realized that the question would fester in my consciousness if Dicky decided again to employ Grace Draper as a model.

Mr. and Mrs. Reed Peters have returned from their wedding trip to Honolulu and are at home at the Tadousac apartments. Mrs. Peters was formerly Miss Marian Howe.

WHY—

Do We Say "Amen" at the End of Prayers?

A wealth of significance is stored up in a word of such antiquity as "Amen" particularly when we remember that it is bound up in the highest and best aspirations—in fact in the very religion—of an ancient people who, thousands of years ago, had attained a culture and civilization by no means inferior to our own.

Amen—otherwise known as Amen or Ammon—was one of the oldest deities of the ancient Egyptians and one of their chief gods. His emblem was a man wearing a red crown, surmounted by the disc of the sun, in token of his dominion over both the earth and the heavens. His name meant "hidden" or "concealed," while one of his titles was Amen-ka-mut-f, the husband of his mother, thus signifying that the deity in question was at the same time the oldest and the youngest of created beings. In the Hebrew language, from which the word comes to us, "Amen" signifies strong or trustworthy—the "God of Truth" referred to in Isaiah being literally the "God of Amen." In using the word at the end of our creeds and prayers, therefore, we not only exclaim, "So be it"—which is the generally accepted meaning of the term—but solemnly affirm the truth of what has been recited.

Parents' Problems

How can a child be broken of the habit of talking too fast?

The child who talks too fast is usually the child who has been told fast in order to say all that he has to say before he is told that he has "talked enough." Such a child can perhaps best be broken of the habit of talking too fast by being assured that you have plenty of time to listen to all that he has to say, so that he need not hurry in saying it.

Out-Door Games.

Here are some out-door games for you:

A Rose Race: Two dozen paper roses are provided, also two tape measures. The roses are each fastened to a wire and must be planted three feet apart, 12 in each row, measuring the distance with a tape line. The racers go in twos and the successful ones race together, a prize of roses waiting for the winner. To rather all the roses and return to the starting point in the quickest time is the object.

A Handkerchief Hanging Race will be amusing. Arrange two clotheslines across the lawn. Two persons are chosen to start the race and each one is given 12 handkerchiefs and a basket of clothespins, and each is assigned a line. At a signal they start to hang up the handkerchiefs. The winner must race again with someone else. Then the final winner is awarded a prize.

Bean Bag Relay: Divide the company present into two lines standing opposite each other facing each other. Give the leader of each line a bean bag, then instruct the lines to pass the bag as fast as possible behind the handkerchiefs. The winner must race again with someone else. Then the final winner is awarded a prize.

A Campfire "Spell Down" was one of the interesting "stunts" a lively crowd gathered around the brightly bonfire on the beach did one summer to amuse themselves. A circle was formed around the fire and the person who proposed the game was the first to spell. Each was required to spell in turn a word without the letter "I" in it, not to exceed six letters nor to contain fewer than three. The spelling had to be done promptly and anyone hesitating or failing to respond quickly was declared out of the game by the umpire. This official was the first who, in the popular opinion of the circle, had failed. As a penalty the first six to be dropped out were obliged to provide some sort of entertainment for the crowd the next evening. The two remaining in the circle the longest were winners and deserving of much praise and honor, and, as recognition, were presented little blue ribbon bows, which, when worn, signified that they were immune from the usual camp bugbear, dishwashing.

The "Barrel and Bell Game" is a good fun-maker. Place a barrel bottom up in the center of a large open space. On it place a desk bell of the kind used by teachers. Make a mark on the ground about four feet from the barrel. Blindfold one of the players and stand him on the mark, facing the barrel. Give him a five-foot stick, a little wider at one end than at the other—a canoe paddle will answer the purpose admirably. Then turn him around till he has made three complete turns. The player must try to keep in mind the location of the barrel while he is being turned. When he stops he may try three times to ring the bell with the stick. Let each player have three turns. The largest number of rings by one person will win the game.

Eyes Strained?

If your eyes are work-strained or tired; if your vision is dim or blurred; if it bothers you to read; if your eyes burn or itch or ache; if you wear glasses, get a bottle of Bon-Opto tablets from your druggist, dissolve one in a fourth of a glass of water and use from two to four times a day to bathe the eyes. Bon-Opto has brought comfort and relief to thousands and thousands.

Note: Doctors say Bon-Opto strengthens eyesight 80% in a week's time in many instances.
