ONE OF THE MOST ludicrous farce comedies is "The Broken Mirror." which Fred Schwarz and company are offering as one of the interesting contributions to the current bill at the Empress. The playlet is characterized by the rapidity with which one surprise is piled on top of another. An important attraction is the song number which wins for Frank Morrell "The Boy From California." hosts of admirers. His singing is perfection in volume, technique, harmany and tonal quality.

The Orpheum is ready for the opening of the season which is set for Sunday matinee, August 21. A force of decorators and other artisans have persevered for the past six weeks on renovations, repairs and changes calculated to contribute to the delights and comforts of Orpheumites. The ladies' retiring rooms are likely to attract the special attention of, and elicit a bit of comment from, the gentler sex. These have been completely redecorated and furnished. The color scheme is blue and taupe. The effect is charming and nicely calculated for lady-dinity's boodoir. The scenery has been retouched and throughout the entire theater from pit to dome there obtains the evidence of care and neat grooming that has always been an Orpeum earmark. The box-office will open next Thursday.

Melodrama pure and simple, but still one in which no one will walk out on the actors till the last thrillis sprung is "The Son of Wallingford," by Mr. and Mrs. George Randoph Chester. Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford, the genial promoter who, while appearing to give others the opportunity to skin him or their friends and neighbors, made off with the hide himself, is a striking character in popular fiction. His return, in the guise of a parent worried over the reappearance of his tricky nature in his son, to many will be as welcome as the return of Sherlock Holmes.

Young Jimmy meets the test of honor and triumphs in love as in finance, though not before all those in his family circle had done a deal of worrying. There are chorus girls, village Shylock, a tramp, a bolhevist and all manner of odd and musing characters in the story. here is J. Rufus himself attired in Driental costume and riding on an elephant, and Blackie Daw inno-cently flirting with the banker's antique daughter while his wife indignantly steals upon him, a thrilling rescue of young Jimmy by the sweetheart who had rejected him because of her suspicions, and a handto-hand fight with a mob in which J. Rufus played a brave, but by no means happy, part. Not because of any literary charm or regard for sweet reason and the possibilities is this swift-moving novel bound to be enjoyed. Simply as a diversion for the mind and a relief from thought and care it occupies a high place on the new book Lovers of nature will enjoy "My Mountains," by the Rev. R. T. Cross. Especially to those who love the mountains and the more rugged scenery of the west will the book appeal.

Dr. Cross for years has been a student of the mountains. He has camped and roamed in practically all of the great parks and there are few places worth while he has not visited. His book deals with his life and studies in the mountains. He describes them as they appeal to him. Being scientist and poet with command of an entrancing vocabulary, the book is out of the ordinary and extremely worth while. The Stratford company of Boston is the publisher.

Of interest to lovers of the drama, and those who wish to write plays as well, is Barrett C. Clark's British and American Drama of Today" (Stewart Kidd company). In a few pages devoted to each play the author catches both the spirit and the technical plans of Pinero, Jones, Wilde, Shaw, Barker, Masefield, Mr. and Mrs. Owen Moore, co-star Barrie, Lady Gregory, Synge, Yeats, Thomas, Moody, Mackaye, Sheldon, Walker and many others.

"Invisible Tides," by Beatrice Kean Seymour (Thomas Seltzer. play grandfather, father and himself publisher), is an English novel of it, for it may be that standards Cullen Landis, leading man for there are higher.
