That Mr. Ford has Japan is studying the advisability demonstrated an unusual, even unique of proposing an international stand-genius for industrial operation and ing council for the guidance and deapparently now for railroad operation velopment of China, says the Koku-is not questioned. Some have gone min Shimbun. The work of this as far as to say that if the railroads council would be based upon the idea of the United States were operated of the powers abandonment of by five or six men whose ability spheres of influence and all other would compare well with that of Mr measures, including extra-territori- Swartz & Co.

ments a high degree of efficiency can be secured, so high in fact, as to Dodge County Bankers justify a lowering of rates, so that if he was able to do this other railroad managers might, following his example, gain like results.

Road Part of Industry. Road Part of Industry.

This however would be doing injustice to the able men who are now straining every nerve in order to secure economy of operation and as soon as possible put the railroads in prosperous condition to the benefit not only of the roads themselves, but of the people. Mr. Ford would be the last one seriously te criticise all American railroad management. He is a fair man and be ther fore understands that there are excaptional reasons why it was possible to convert a deficit into a surplus in the operation of his railroad.

of when reference is made to the triumphs, now recognized, which Mr. Ford has secured.

He is exceptionally situated because from one point of view his railroad represent one pocket and his industry represent another, both pockets being those of Mr. Ford. Railway managers say that if it were possible to secure a railroad which is so situated as to give it a very large tonnage, coal for instance, then it could distribute this tonnage among the various lines composing its entire system and thereby gain earnings sufficient to pay operating costs; interest and reasonable dividends. Mr. Ford did not buy this railroad because he had ambition to venture into the field of railway operation and to match his achievements with those which were gained by some of our great railway managers and promoters. He bought this railroad, if the common understanding be correct, because he realized that if it were wisely operated it would be a valuable accessory to his manufacturing industry. But he realized that he could not get full value unless it was adequately managed and it is a fact that he has supprised railway managers by his success in knoring the unions, by paying higher wages than unions ask while at the same time he prepared to reduce rates. But it should be borne in mind railway managers say that the reduction in rates is of great benefit to his industry. Railway managers acknowledge Mr. Ford's almost unique ability as an andustrial manager and now as a railway management to make critical comparisons between their management and that which Mr. Ford has instituted and so far carried on successfully.

fact that the visible increase was mainly at scaboard points. Limited country offerings to arrive and bullish news from the southwest also attracted local comment.

The price trend early was narrow, but values were kept above the previous finish. There was a little scattered buying in evidence at the immediate outset, prompted by the heavy North American shipments. Good rains over the belt since Saturady were reported and this led to the belief that arrivals would show poor quality. The advance met with profit taking, resulting in the climination of most of the early gains, Local interests reported country offerings to rarrive as light and southwest houses also told of the indisposition of farmers to sell their wheat.

Corn Trading Light.

Trade in corn was of a mixed character and rather light in volume. Prices were kept within a narrow mergin, a slight advance recorded early being supplemented by a dip. Commission houses were buyers on the firmness in wheat, while cash interests sold on the advance. Liberal receipts and free offerings from the country were depressing factors. Crop indications are none too bright and there is a possibility of a further reduction in the yield in the next government issue.

Onts started steady, but weakened under selling that met with meager support. Liquidation of long stuff in a small way was a burden on the September delivery, while hedging sales in the December pressed that grain. Outside interest was poor. Country offerings were reported as light. Movement of grain, however, keeps up fairly good and consists mostly of the new crop or light weight grain.

German marks went to a still lower value on today's foreign exchange market, touching $1.16\foralle{4}, against Saturday's low price of $1.16\foralle{4}, The complete figures of the treasury on the amount and kinds of money existing in the United States August 1 are interesting in several ways. Attention will probably be directed chiefly to the rise of $65,256,000 in the stock of gold last month, bringing our total holdings $192,536,000 above those of July 1, 1919, which, until June 1 of the present year, was the high record in our history. As everyone knows, however, money in the form of federal reserve notes has been reduced while the stock of gold was rising and the treasury's August 1 report eatimates the country's total supply today only $50,552,000 greater than at the same date of 1920.
