Lois Robbins Weds In Woodland Camp

Unique in every way will be the wedding of Miss Lois Robbins, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Robbins, and Leo Bozell, both of this city. In the glow of the setting sun in the quiet woods near Lake Okoboji they will be united in marriage, Saturday afternoon, at 5 o'clock by Rev. Thomas Horton, an Episcopal clergyman from Waterloo, Ia.

During the summer Miss Robbins has been a swimming instructor at Camp Holiday on the lake. Since her stay there the girls under her care have repeatedly requested that she be married at the camp. Finally Miss Robbins agreed to their proposal and the girls constructed a woodland altar on a cathedral hill, beyond which the couple will make their nuptial vows.

The only attendants will be Miss Polly Robbins, young sister of the bride, and Morris E. Jacobs of Omaha. Mr. and Mrs. Robbins, parents of the bride, and Mr. and Mrs. Wyman Robbins will be present at the ceremony.

Mr. Bozell and his bride will return to Omaha in about 10 days. The engagement of this couple was announced last December and it was thought by friends that the marriage would take place in October.

The bride was graduated from Smith college and has been actively engaged in social settlement work. Mr. Bozell was graduated from the University of Kansas.

Benefit Show For V. N. A. at Colonial

Residents of the Colonial hotel were guests at an impromptu vaudeville and motion picture show Thursday evening given by several of their number.

Rudger Norton, who has attained a reputation for feminine impersonations, gave a Grecian dance. His sister, Dorothy Norton, wishing to rival her brother, gave a Hawaiian "hula" dance in costume and sang Hawaiian songs.

Edwin Swobe sang and Margaret Showtwell gave piano selections. The "movie" was donated by C. L. Peavey.

Previous to the performance, Mrs. E. J. Norton read a humorous paper concerning the various people who make their home at the hotel.

Proceeds of the show were given to the Visiting Nurse association. Sunset beach, Glenwood, Minn. They will return to Omaha the latter part of August.

Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Sherman, who spent a month at Reserve, Wis., has returned. Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Hubbard, who occupied the Sherman residence during that time, have returned to their apartment at the Colonial.

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Low, who are at Eaton's ranch in Wyoming with Mr. and Mrs. Wilson Low, are expected the first week in September. Mrs. Wilson Low may come to Omaha for a short visit in September before returning to California.

Miss Cornelia Baum, who attended Marlborough school in Los Angeles last season, will go to Miss Somer's school in Washington, D. C., this fall. Miss Gertrude Kountze, who had planned to go to an eastern finishing school, has decided to remain in Omaha for the winter and tutor at home.

Miss Hilda Langdon, who underwent an appendicitis operation Wednesday at Nicholas Sem hospital, is improving. Miss Langdon returned last Sunday from the University of Illinois, where she completed a summer course. She leaves the latter part of September to enter her senior year at Smith college.

Field Club. Mrs. George Jones entertained a foursome at luncheon at the Field club Friday. Parties of children at the matinee dance were entertained by Theodore Tillotson and L. H. Blanchard.

Prize Adds Zest to Game. "I used to think that bridge was a terrible waste of time, but now I take a real interest in it," said Jones to his companion. "My wife and myself have been playing several times a week with Mr. and Mrs. Brown, who live next door to us on Long Island, and it has only been recently that I have become interested in the game.

"Instead of putting up a little prize like we used to, we now play for something more interesting. If my wife or myself win the game, Brown has to cut our lawn the next day, but if Brown or his wife carry off the honors I have to do a little work myself. I tell you that puts a little interest in the game."—New York Mail.

Problems That Perplex Answered by BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Ask Him to Call. Dear Miss Fairfax: There is a young man who has never taken me out, but who has escorted me home on several occasions, and who has offered to take me out once, but I declined on account of a previous engagement. I like him very much. From the attitude of his boy friends and from things that they say I am led to believe that he cares for me.

As I do not take to men generally and as I am more fond of this young man than I have been of anyone else, how do you suggest that I find out his attitude toward me? SUE. Why not invite the young man to visit you at your own home? If you were to do this when you chance to meet him, it would be pointed out or seem like making advances. But why not be honest and invite him frankly to call on you?

Acknowledging an Introduction. A woman in her own house invariably extends her hand when anyone is presented to her, saying at the same time in a cordial tone, "Mr. (or Mrs.) Brown, I am very glad to meet you." or "How do you do, Miss Jones; it is a great pleasure to know you." In other cases it is usually sufficient for a woman to bow politely and repeat the name of the person presented. There are those, though, who follow the less recognized practice of bowing slightly and saying, "How do you do, Miss Brown." A young lady, unless she is playing the part of hostess, does not express in words any marked gratification. The gentleman is presented to her, but a man of any age, on being presented to a lady, is required to signify his pleasure by a polite phrase, such as "I am very happy to meet you, Miss Brown."

Unhappy Wife: I am sure there is more to your case than your letter reveals. Don't you know that the law is on your side and will protect you against a husband who would try to divorce you with a 6-weeks-old child? Men can't get divorces without reason and especially men with children. Don't let your husband scare you with his unkind threats.

Try to live together happily, but remember if it comes to a separation that your husband is legally bound to make some provision for you and your child. Has he any property? If so, you have a claim upon it. You will need a lawyer's advice if the case gets any worse. But can't you just treat his remarks about the "other girl" as a joke and wish him back to a happy existence with you? Try hard, then try again. Perhaps you are not cheerful enough, but too fearful and matter of fact about things. Romance should not end with marriage.

Junior and Senior: Maybe you just imagine that the town people talk about you. Do what is right and forget about what people say. Examine current magazines or watch the "Blue Book" fashions in the Bee for suggestions regarding clothes. The chief objection I have to rolling stockings below the knees is that it usually makes the girl conscious of herself—a very uncomfortable feeling—and it is very likely to attract attention from undesirable men.

Happy Hollow Club. Dinner parties of five will be entertained Friday evening at Happy Hollow club by E. H. Benner and W. F. Denny.

C. O. Wilcoxson and Roy Ralph will each have parties of 10 Saturday evening. Oscar Engler will have eight guests. Smaller groups will be entertained by F. R. Perfect, F. P. Bell and E. H. Benner.

A cabaret dinner-dance will be given at the club next Tuesday evening. Agnes Britton and Elaine Halbee will give the program.

A Welcome Arrival. When I set the last stitch and folded the shimmering stuff to put it away I was so sleepy that I could scarcely see it, and I was afraid that I would not waken on the hour I had mentally set myself, as I almost invariably am able to do. But at 6 o'clock I sat bolt upright

HOLDING A HUSBAND Adele Garrison's New Phase of Revelations of a Wife

How Katie Came to Madge's New Home. I sat up until midnight sewing the draperies and curtains which Dicky had requested me to make for the rustic studio into which he was transforming the old Dacey corrie. That this would be the result of my assenting to his request I had known when I yielded to it. But Dicky, to do him justice, had not realized, I think, how much labor was involved in the thing he had asked.

"For the love of Mike!" he grumbled, putting aside his magazine and knocking the ashes from his cigar. "Are you going to keep this up all night? Didn't you hear that clock strike 10? Remember, you dragged me out of bed this morning at a most unbecoming hour. I'm simply dead for sleep. Chuck it, and come to bed! How about those beds at Tiger's? I hope they're better than the ones at the other place. There may be a soft side to a board, but not to those beds, I could almost find it in my heart to wish Lil and Marian wouldn't come home from the hospital until we are under our own vine and fig tree again, and I can have my own mattress."

"I think you'll find the beds Mrs. Tiger furnishes are very comfortable." I replied sedately, keeping my eyes upon the curtain I was hemming, and making no move to rise. I had done all the machine work first, that I might not disturb a sleeping family with its whir, and now I was struggling with seemingly interminable stretches of handwork.

"What d'ye mean, you're going to stay down here and sew?" Dicky demanded irritably. "I'll get these draperies done for you tomorrow I shall have to sit up longer." I explained a bit impatiently as I threaded my needle. "Oh, can the martyr stuff!" Dicky retorted unpleasantly. "You've had most of the afternoon and all of the evening, and you'll have all tomorrow afternoon to do that stuff, and yet you're handing me a silk like this."

"I did not get back with the sewing machine until after 5 o'clock," I reminded him, "and tomorrow morning I have to meet Jim and Katie."

"Oh, you're determined to chain yourself to a stake and pour boiling oil over your writhing body, I can see that!" he sneered. "Well, have it your own way, old dear, but it'll be a long time before I ask you another favor." He went huffily out of the room, while I heroically resisted an impulse to crumple the draperies up in a ball and hurl them after him. The next thing I had to combat were self-pitying tears, but fortunately my common sense and my sense of humor reminded me that Dicky not only did not mean a word he said, but that in the morning he would have forgotten he said them, and if accused would strenuously and indignantly deny having uttered the words, and I bent to my sewing with a grim little smile at my husband's vagaries.

As I sat bolt upright in bed, as if I had been suddenly galvanized by an electric shock, and for a bewildered half-minute wondered where I was, and what it was that was so depressing my spirits. As I gradually came to myself I realized with a shame-faced little smile at my own babyish fears, that the depression of the day before because of my knowledge that my father and Allen Drake were to be engaged upon some mysterious and absorbing business of their own while Grace Draper was with us, was still with me. But as I rose and dressed I made a strenuous effort to shake it off.

Curiously enough, it was the remembrance that Katie and Jim were coming which changed depression into tranquil relief. I had not known how much I depended upon these faithful, humble friends until I realized that the day which had just dawned would bring them to me. "When is that first train?" Mother Graham's voice—subdued because of Junior, yet brisk and dominant—came to my ears from her doorway as soon as I closed my room door behind me. I suppressed a tiny smile as I answered her, for I knew what her question betrayed. Despite her capricious strictures upon Katie, she depends upon her faithful services as much as I do, has missed her as sorely and is as glad to welcome her back.

"Ten o'clock," I answered. "But she'll hardly take that train. She'll have to leave at 4 o'clock in the morning." "If it were her own moving you can bet she'd be stirring her stumps, but as it's your business, that's different again!" I forced back the hot retort which rose to my lips, for I did not wish to anger her on this day of Katie's home-coming. Mother Graham's crankiness is to Katie what a lighted match is to a powder barrel, and I had no wish for an explosion.

We ate breakfast amicably together, though I had to bite my lips several times to keep back a defense of my loyal little maid. For Mother Graham's disappointment that she was not to be expected before noon was venting itself in slighting remarks about Katie's loyalty. And then there came a shout from out-

TENDER FEET HELPED BY SOOTHING MASSAGE

Aches, excessive perspiration and smarting can be ended

One of the new developments in the proper care of the feet—a part of Blue-jay Foot Treatment—is a cooling, penetrating balm, called Blue-jay Foot Relief. Massage the feet with it thoroughly, after bathing them with Blue-jay Soap. This brings quick relief. Another part of the treatment is Blue-jay Foot Powder, a pleasing deodorant. The three articles—obtainable at all druggists—keep your feet in perfect condition and end nervous annoyance and constant irritation. Write for free booklet—"The Proper Care of the Feet"—to Bauer & Black, Chicago.
