Things You'll Love To Make.

Knitting Bag and Worsted Holder.

A very pretty and handy knitting bag and worsted holder is shown today. Cut two circles of silk, cloth, velvet or cretonne of a bright hue. Each circle should be 12 inches in diameter. Stitch the circles together to form a bag, with an opening at the top large enough through which to pass a ball or two of worsted. Line this bag with a nice plain silk. Cut a piece of black patent leather (or a good quality of black oilcloth) to fit on the bag as shown. Finish the edges of the bag and the top of the patent leather with silk cord or ribbon. Make an eyelet at the bottom center of the bag. Place your worsted into the bag proper, bring the end down through the eyelet. Carry your knitting in the front patent leather pocket. You will appreciate your knitting bag and worsted holder because your ball of worsted will never drop out.

"Taxi!"

"Taxi!" Some fortunate Omaha women will be able to make this imperious call quite recklessly after the bridge party next Friday at Mrs. A. L. Reed's home.

The reason?

A $10 bill calling for taxi service is one of the interesting prizes for which the bridge players will compete.

Chester Nieman of the Omaha Taxicab company, whose sister, Miss Frances Nieman is chairman of the committee in charge of the party, donated the taxi-bill.

The bridge party is to be given by the Women's Overseas Service League to raise funds to carry on their work among ex-service men. Tickets are $1.

Miss Catherine Gavin, home on furlough from Red Cross work in Europe, and Miss Laura Matthews, on leave from her social service center in France, will be honor guests at the overseas girls' next meeting Sunday at 1 o'clock at Carter Lake club. They will also attend the bridge party.

Problems That Perplex

Answered by BEATRICE FAIRFAX

The Course of True Love.

Dear Miss Fairfax: I have been engaged to a girl for three years and have always found her to be ideal. We got along beautifully until a couple of days ago, when she confessed that for the last two months she has had a growing affection for a man in her office. She says she does not love him, as he is not the type of a man she would choose for a husband.

She is unhappy because she is not giving me a square chance and telling me to wait. We have planned to make a stern fight to bring her to her right senses, as she is positive she does not love him.

She tells me at times she hates him and other times she feels happy in his presence.

J. P. The girl has been perfectly honest with you. The mere fact that she can so coldly analyze her feelings for the other man and can discuss them with you shows they haven't a deep hold on her imagination. Try to find which of two courses works with her. She may be unconsciously trying to rouse your jealousy and to speed the day of her marriage.

Perhaps the first glow of your romance is gone and this is her way of reviving it. If that is wrong, do the sensible thing and help her get this infatuation out of her system by discussion and calm planning with you.

Rising to Receive Introductions.

A hostess invariably rises to accept an introduction to either a man or woman. A woman, while a guest at a dinner or afternoon tea, does not rise when a man is introduced to her; nor when she is one of a group to which a man is introduced, unless it is some one who is somewhat older than herself or a person of distinction, or, unless she is seated beside her hostess, who naturally rises to greet a newcomer.

In all other circumstances a woman rises to receive an introduction to one of her own sex. It is scarcely necessary to say that a man always introduces an introduction to a woman in which he has part, whether the person to whom he is made known is man or woman, old or young.

It is discreet and polite to give attention when a stranger is presented. In order to catch the name; but on failing in this, a woman introduced to a person older than herself has a right to ask, gently, "Will you not tell me whom I have the pleasure of meeting, for I did not catch your name?" To a person nearer her own age she may say with less formality, "Mrs. Brown called you Miss Jones, did she not?"

Thelma rule says as well to mention the right to open my mail when it is addressed in full? She claims mother tells her to do so. Will you please advise me as to what I can do about this matter, as it vexes me when my mail is handed to me and the envelope opened. RUTH.

First thing, Ruth, you should be perfectly willing to have your sister and mother see. But one right which every sane, living person should be accorded is the right to open his or her own mail.

THE TALE OF GRUNTY PIG BY ARTHUR SCOTT BAILEY

CHAPTER XV.

Grunt Means Mischievous.

Jolly Robin and his wife told their friends that Grunt Pig was going to teach them a lesson. The birds had many a laugh over the matter. Not till old Mr. Crow visited the orchard one day did the Robin family cease chuckling over what they called "the joke of the season."

"Don't laugh too soon!" Mr. Crow croaked. "This Grunt Pig means mischief. He isn't going to teach you the sort of lesson you've been snickering about. What he intends to do is to harm you in some way.

Now, nobody in Pleasant Valley could look gloomier than old Mr. Crow. And when he hinted darkly in his hoarse way that there was trouble ahead for the Robin family he threw Jolly Robin's wife into a flutter.

"Oh, what does Grunt Pig mean to do to us?" Mrs. Robin quavered. "I'd rather not tell you," said old Mr. Crow. "I don't want you to worry."

Mr. Crow left them then. Of course he couldn't have chosen a better way to upset Mrs. Robin. Even Jolly himself had to admit after a while that he could think of nothing that seemed to cheer his wife in the least. I'll speak to Mr. Crow again,"

HOLDING A HUSBAND

Adele Garrison's New Phase of "Revelations of a Wife"

The Way Katie Banished Worry

From the minute that Katie arrived Junior was her adoring shadow. It seemed too absurd to think that a child so young should remember anything so vividly as he evidently did the devoted woman who had given him the place in her heart which her own mother had occupied if it had lived. But I had purposely kept memories of her alive in his baby mind while we were down south. And twice a week while we were gone had some picture postal cards addressed to Junior followed her around as if he were an affectionate little puppy, and it was only until he was safely in bed for his late forenoon nap that I found an opportunity to take Katie over to the Dacey farm house.

There Mrs. Ticer and Jerry, having finished the cleaning of the rooms which Katie and Jim were to occupy, were busily engaged with Sam Ticer in transforming the old corn crib into a studio for Dicky.

The older Ticer—who included carpentry among the trades of which he is jack, but no master—had cut window spaces of standard half-window size all around the old structure, and was covering them with screening.

"You can get those windows, all you want, from a place over at East Hampton," he had explained, "and I can put 'em on hinges and attach 'em by cords to hooks in the roof above. Then you won't never need to bother with 'em unless it rains, and they won't take a minute to lower if it does."

As we came up Dicky hurried toward us. His coat was off, his shirt sleeves turned up, his hair disheveled, while a smudge of black across his face completed a picture at which I gazed in astonishment. Dicky is most fastidious about his personal appearance, and he is undeniably indolent about any physical labor. Yet he had every appearance of enjoying himself immensely.

"What do you think of this, old dear?" he demanded. "Sam tells me that these bushes around this thing are pink climbing roses, and that among them are morning-glory vines. Can you imagine anything more nifty than that? Well, Katie, can't you like your new home?"

He had shifted the inquiry to Katie with dispatch, and well I knew the reason for it. To my faithful, tempestuous little maid, this, her first inspection of the new home, was an event of the utmost importance, and I had seen—as I knew had Dicky—her face redden and her eyes flash at what she considered his neglect to greet her.

often from both boys and girls, but the reason I am writing to you is to ask you a question, has my older sister the right to open my mail when it is addressed in full? She claims mother tells her to do so. Will you please advise me as to what I can do about this matter, as it vexes me when my mail is handed to me and the envelope opened. RUTH.

Parents' Problems

How can children best be taught the horrors of war?

This is a difficult question, for the reason that children are too young and too sensitive to be taught even in small degree the horror of war. Perhaps the same purpose would be served by teaching them the beauty of peace. Begin by making clear to them that peace, like every other good thing, should begin at home. Then lose no opportunity of pointing out to them blessings which can only be enjoyed in a condition of peace. Also acquaint them with the efforts of noted pacifists.

At a mothers' meeting held recently in South Center, Kan., a ban was put on short skirts and high heels.

Jewel, Flower, Color Symbols for Today

By MILDRED MARSHALL.

Today's talisman stone is the sard, which is especially lucky for women. If set in a design in which the grape vine and ivy are interwoven, it is sure to exercise its powers for good, according to an ancient belief.

Today's natal stone is the opal which the ancients believed endowed its wearer with a changeable temperament and attractive personality. Violet is today's color. It exerts a soothing influence on its wearer, and should be worn by those who are nervous or extremely emotional.

The flower for today is the scarlet geranium, potent in dispelling sorrow.

Romance in Origin Of Superstitions

By H. IRVING KING.

Onions.

The superstition of "folk-medicine" all over the United States assigns medical virtues which, therapeutically, they do not possess. The superstitions vary in different sections but all ascribe great power over disease to the onion.

In some parts of New England it is said that if you hang a row of onions over the door the house will be guarded against the entry of any disease which might be brought into it by a visitor. As the visitor crosses the threshold the onions over the door "draw" any infectious or contagious disease which he may have out of him into themselves. Therefore you must not hang over a door.

The onion superstition comes down to us from the Egyptians by way of the Latins. The Italians sometimes carry an onions in their pockets as a protection against the evil-eye which, according to an old Neapolitan writer, is very effective because "the devil respects the onion, the clients having adored it equally with himself." By the ancients, the onion was a sort of vegetable god powerful to protect if propitiated. The string of onions over the New England doorway would make a citizen of Thebes in the reign of Rameses feel quite at home.

Common Sense

By J. J. MUNDY.

Ever Have a Grouch?

Did you ever know anyone to be grouchy who did not think they had a grievance?

What would seem like a grievance to another might not affect you at all, but nevertheless the man or the woman with a grouch has a personal grievance.

If you are closely connected with a grouchy one, you are the first to notice it and wonder why.

You cannot imagine, when you are feeling good, why another should feel quite the opposite.

When persons are busy every minute there is no time to think, but when a bit of leisure, the mind begins to think.

Look out that no one has a chance to feel lonely on your account.

Because specific facts are not mentioned from day to day in this regard is a reason for believing that the time is far distant when certain things are going to strike home to the other fellow.

In providing yourself amusement, do not think to ease your mind about those dependent upon you to state their personal likes and dislikes in the amusement question and take a definite sum and do a certain thing to "make up" for what you do.

Where It Started

Bogus.

The term "Bogus," meaning false, is a corruption of the word "Borghese," and was derived from a famous swindler of that name who, in 1837, flooded the west with counterfeit bills and notes on non-existent banks. In time any worthless bill was called a "Borghese bill," and the word became "bogus" by process of long use.

REV. A. H. SYKES DISCUSSES HIS WIFE'S TROUBLE

Thinks It Only Short Time Before Mrs. Sykes Will Be Fully Restored.

Rev. A. H. Sykes, former pastor of the Watkins Park Presbyterian church, Nashville, Tenn., says:

"After seeing what Tanlac has accomplished in my wife's case, I am convinced that it is a medicine of great power and extraordinary merit. I do not think I have ever seen anything to give such prompt results. Mrs. Sykes had been in delicate health for 10 months, suffering from stomach trouble and nervous breakdown."

"I frequently sought medical advice but Tanlac is the only thing that gave her any relief. After taking the medicine only a short time, she was able to sit up and help with the household duties. I think it only a short time until her health will be fully restored."

Tanlac is sold in Omaha by the Sherman & McConnell Drug Co. and by leading druggists everywhere.
