

Camp Brewster, Where Omaha Y.W.C.A. Girls Frolic In Summer

The Girls spend much of their time in the water on hot summer days. Camp Brewster swimming is under the direction of Miss Quinter shown in the center of the pool.

Bostwick Photos

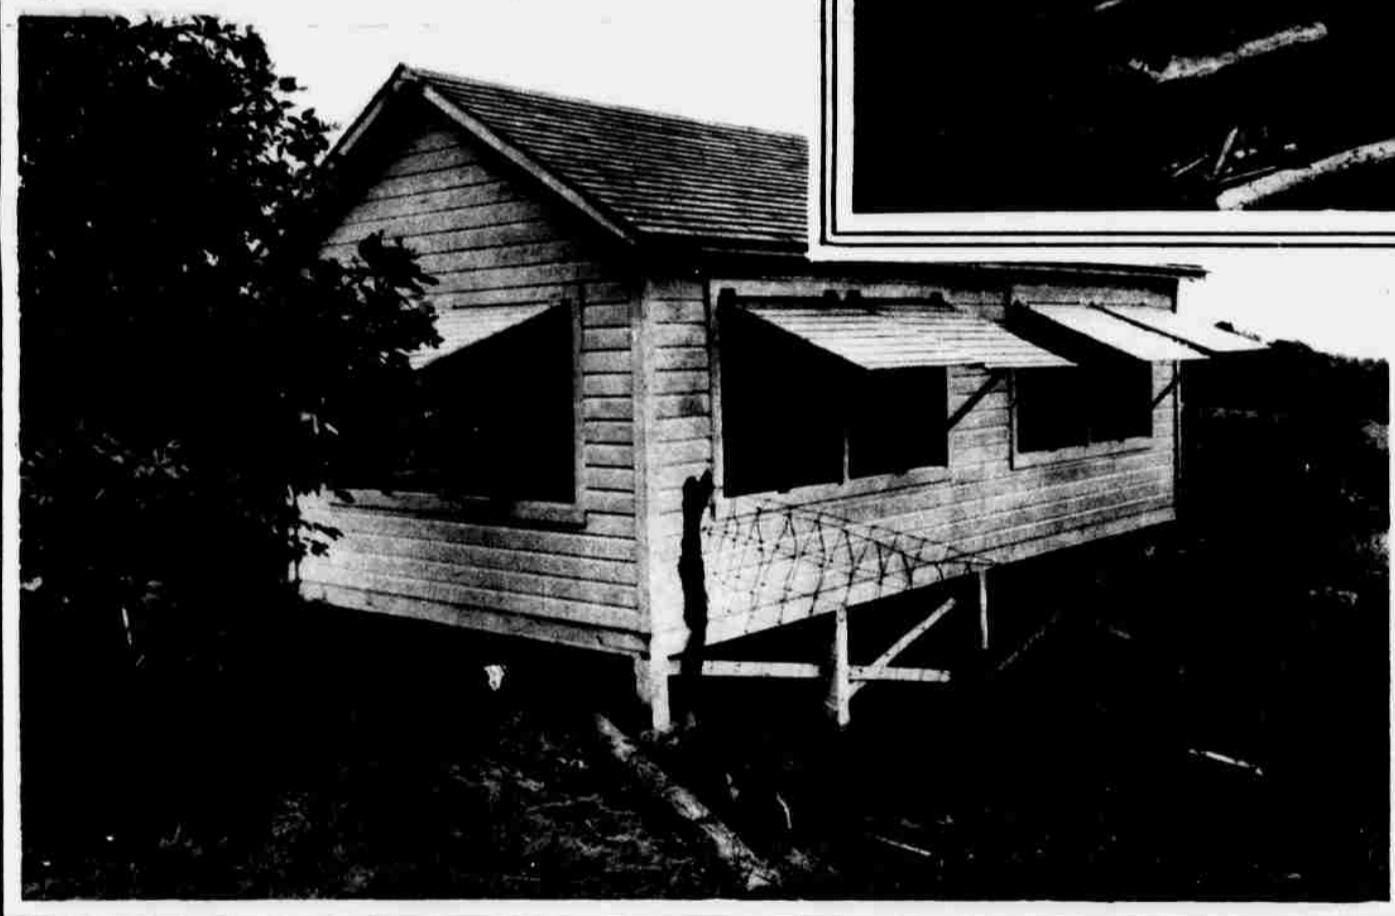

A merry crowd at the camp entrance. The camp, consisting of community house, dormitories and small "huts", is on the Missouri river, five miles south of Omaha. It is named in honor of Miss Clara Brewster, Y.W.C.A. athletic director.

Out door ranges and dining tables.

A quartet in regulation camp uniform. The smiles express their verdict on Brewster hospitality.

Interior and exterior views of one of the camps huts. The camp needs a dozen more like this one to accommodate summer campers.

Chow time. Every camper does her share in preparing and serving meals. Carry back your dishes, wash a sign on the walls of the mess hall.

Swimming class ready for a plunge in the big camp pool.

A hammock squad, while away lazy summer hours with magazines, candy and making a bit of gossip now and then.