fected. Corn in a few other counturity.

Report released today by A. E. Anderson, federal crop statistician for Nebraska on the condition of the Nebraska corn crop, reads as follows: High winds and temperatures have matured corn very rapidly, particularly in the south Platte territory west of Lancaster and Gage counties. Part of the corn is well dented and the husks dry.

There has been no improvment in the drouth sections and the average cut 50 per cent. The crop for all states, as a whole, shows considerable deterioration and some permanent injury, according to the mid-month crop summary. Former Bluffs Girl

Potato Crop in Nebraska Will Show Increase

Growers in Western Part of The State Get From $1.60 To $1.75 for Sacked Tubers.

The commercial potato crop is western Nebraska promises to be as large or larger than the crop of 1920, according to O. D. Miller, representative of the federal and state marketing bureaus at Alliance, who recently made a tour of the western potato counties. Assessors reports show increased potato acreage in nearly every county, espedistricts, which will be only partly offset by the poor stand found in a large number of fields in the dry land districts.
