

Ak Field Gates to Open on Wonder Program Tuesday

Horse Races, Vaudeville and Life-Risking Stunts of Ruth Law for Afternoons; Fire-works and Show, Nights.

Next Tuesday afternoon the gates at Ak-Sar-Ben field will open on probably the greatest outdoor amusement program ever offered in the state of Nebraska.

Everything to be desired in general amusement will be provided. Each afternoon horse racing will be featured. Some of the best harness horses in the country have been entered. More than 250 head of fine racing stock is to arrive on the grounds by Tuesday morning.

Then Ruth Law. Then there will be the world's greatest aviatrix, Ruth Law, to perform her wonder stunts. Miss Law's performance consists of trick and fancy flying in an airplane. As a climax for her thrillers she stands upon the top of the plane while her pilot, Lieut. Verne Treat, puts the "ship" through the loop the loop.

A member of Miss Law's flying circus, seated in an automobile going at a terrific speed, changes from the automobile into an airplane by the aid of a rope ladder.

Program Starts at 1:30. In order to crowd this program into an afternoon's entertainment, Ak-Sar-Ben officials have decided to start the show promptly at 1:30 p. m. The night show will offer in place of the races, the pyrotechnic spectacle, "Montezuma," or the "Days of the Aztecs," a gigantic fireworks display. In the production of "Montezuma" a city more than 500 feet long is erected and more than 250 persons are included in the cast.

"Smiles of 1921." Then also every night will be produced the "Smiles of 1921." Emile DeKecat will offer 50 gorgeously costumed girls, with special scenery and 12 principals. "Smiles" has been presented four consecutive months in one of Chicago's leading summer gardens where it has met with pronounced success. Automobile races will replace horse races on Saturday afternoon. Omaha will have an opportunity to witness the driving of several of America's star dirt track stars, according to present indications.

Jack and Jill

"HILDA quit today," said Jill soberly, when Jack came home to dinner. "Quit? What for?" "Said the work was too hard," said Jill.

"Well, there it is. Give 'em the best in the world and they will quit you cold."

"We never asked her to do any of the laundry work," wailed Jill, "and she was always tree at 7 o'clock and I let her go to the movies any afternoon she wished to, and only last week I gave her that green moirée dinner gown that you disliked so."

Jack laughed. "Well?" mildly demanded his wife. "What do you think Hilda is going to do with a dinner gown?"

"She said that housework ties her down too much. Complained that she had to get up at half past six to get your breakfast and even had the insolence to say that she felt as if she was one of the family, we asked so much of her time. So she's going to work in a shirt-waist factory downtown, where she has to be in attendance only eight hours a day, with a half day off every Saturday. She was really quite impertinent about it, too, honey. Said she would earn $20 a week and not have to cater to any man as —"

"As what?" "As funny as you are," Jack laughed. "Oh, honey, that is what I resent so much," said Jill, hastily, "because you are really not funny at all. Well, the thing to settle now is, said Jack practically, 'is what are we going to do now?'"

Jill squinted her pretty shoulders. "Well, Mister Jack, I'll tell you what we are going to do—we are not going to have another maid in this house. I'm just going to do the work and we'll save at least $15 a week. That's what Hilda cost us, her wages and her keep. We'll just save that money."

"But, Jill dear, I will feel terribly uncomfortable with you slaving at home here all day."

"Nonsense," said his wife, "It is not slavery at all. You see, a hired maid just feels that it is slavery because it is not her home. And the man about the house belongs to another woman."

"I hope so," interrupted Jack feverently. "And the maid cannot help but get into a frame of mind that makes her as touchy as a grand opera star."

It went off beautifully. There were amazing roasts and dainty desserts and tantalizing salads and oh, wonderful coffee. There were waffles for breakfast and Jack wondered that he had not discovered Jill's culinary artistry before.

But on the second Thursday Jill sighed over the waffles and Jack wondered if she might be fagged. "Dearest," she said finally, "I believe I'll take Hilda's usual Thursday afternoon off."

"By George, I should say so, darling," said Jack, quickly. "What is it, matinee or bridge?" "Neither," said Jill cheerfully. "I'm going down to the employment office to get a new maid."

Escaped Toledo Bandits Hunted By Omaha Police

"Keep Your Hands on Your Guns," Laconically Warns Chief as Detectives Join Search.

Acting on a tip that three gunmen, who broke jail in Toledo, O., while waiting trial in connection with the $100,000 mail robbery three last winter, are in Omaha, Chief of Detectives Van Deusen yesterday afternoon assigned four men to scour the city until they are captured.

All three men are known to be "bad." They are Joe Urbaytis, George Lewis, alias George Rogers, and C. S. Schultz.

"Keep your hands on your guns," Van Deusen laconically told Detectives Franks, Aughe, Buglewicz and Cich before they left the station.

The three fugitives were indicted in connection with the mail robbery on February 17.

They made their escape by overpowering two deputy sheriffs, who were shot during the encounter.

Detectives at the station are of the opinion they will not be captured without a fight.
