Miss McGilton Is the Bride of Mr. Connor

The wedding of Miss Eleanor McGilton, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. G. McGilton, and Mr. Edward Connor was celebrated Saturday evening at 8:30 o'clock at the First Central Congregational church.

The Rev. Frank Smith read the marriage lines before a large gathering of friends of the bride and groom.

The church was elaborately decorated with palms, ferns and pink chrysanthemums. A row of cathedral candles decorated the choir rail.

The bride, who was given away by her father, is the first bride of this new church. She looked lovely in a gown of soft white satin heavily embroidered in white. The bodice was cut in the popular Jenny neck and it was finished with long lace sleeves.

The skirt was short and a court train of white heavily embroidered satin fell from the shoulders.

The tulle veil was held with a crown of duchess lace and fell to the end of the train. She carried a shower bouquet of brides roses and lilies of the valley. Her only ornament was a string of pearls.

Miss Rachel Metcalf was the maid of honor.

She was gowned in soft pink satin. The bodice was cut low and finished without sleeves and the skirt made short. A pink band and small pink flowers were worn in the hair and she carried a shower bouquet of Columbia roses.

Miss Sarah Powell of Milwaukee, a classmate of the bride at Smith college, was the only bridesmaid. She wore a gown of pink chiffon made over pink satin. It was made sleeveless and cut short. She also wore a pink band decorated with small flowers in her hair, and she carried a shower bouquet of Ophelia roses.

The Misses Charlotte McDonald and Dorothy Sherman stretched the ribbons. They were gowned alike in green tulle made over soft green satin. They wore silver slippers, and bands of silver set with rhinestones in their hair.

Mr. Connor was attended by his brother, Mr. Robert Connor, of Des Moines as best man, and the following ushers: Messrs. Charles Mattson, Morton Wakeley, Edward Phelps, Kendall Hammond, Alfred Munger and W. H. Smalls.

Mrs. W. H. Smalls sang "All Joy Be Thine" before the ceremony.

A reception for a few friends followed the ceremony at the home of the bride.

Mrs. McGilton wore a gown of blue lace heavily trimmed with blue sequins.

The young couple left after the reception for a honeymoon trip to Washington and New York.

The bride's go-away suit was of dark blue tricotine. With this was worn a small nasturtium colored hat.

Mr. and Mrs. Connor will be at home after November 1, at the St. George apartments, Thirty-first avenue and Dodge street.

Club Women Sponsor Sale of Aero Seals.

The Omaha Woman's club is sponsoring the sale of seals advertising the International Aero meet, to be held here in November.

These seals, which are similar to the Christmas Red Cross seals, may be used on United States mail, according to Mrs. Charles Johannes, club president.

The seals will be on sale at the opening meeting of the Woman's club Monday afternoon in the Burgess-Nash auditorium.

Table Mats.

Extremely useful mats for protecting the table from hot dishes can be made by cutting up old felt hats into round, oblong or oval shapes.

An Unqualified Endorsement of Hard Roll Bread

FROM the Good Housekeeping Bureau of Foods, Sanitation and Health, conducted by the Good Housekeeping magazine. This approval places HARD ROLL BREAD in the great family of nationally known food products that have stood the rigid tests of this bureau.

Only the food products that enjoy a national or territorial distribution are brought to the attention of this bureau for examination, and only those food products that qualify under its severe tests are entitled to the use of the trade-marked oval label of this bureau.

All foods tested in this laboratory undergo rigid examination for quality, purity and wholesomeness. Chemists skilled in food analysis, test each product for its composition and purity. The results of their findings are then submitted to a specialist in human nutrition. The endorsement of HARD ROLL BREAD then is based on the findings of an exact science, supplemented by trained and experienced judgment.

We take a pardonable pride in the fact that HARD ROLL BREAD stood these severe tests, and yet to further protect YOU we have, by the installation of the world's largest bread cooling machine made possible the wrapping of HARD ROLL. Hereafter your HARD ROLL BREAD will be wrapped in a sanitary wax wrapper bearing a new distinctive design, which includes the trade marked label of the GOOD HOUSEKEEPING BUREAU OF FOODS, SANITATION AND HEALTH and the words, "HARD ROLL BREAD—IT'S CERTIFIED."

WARNING: The trade name HARD ROLL BREAD is protected by the laws of the state of Nebraska and the United States. The trademark and design now used on the wrapper of HARD ROLL BREAD are protected by the laws of the United States.

Problems That Perplex

Answered by BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

SHE laughed at me and said it was old stuff I was pulling. She said she'd heard a lot in her time about these directors' meetings, and how a fellow was always being called on to work overtime. And she said next time I was anxious to get out of a date with her I should use my imagination and think up something a little better than a yarn about how the boss asked me as a special favor to stay on the job until 10. . . . And I will, too. Next time I'll lie to her good and plenty and then, I suppose, she'll be satisfied."

I wonder. Isn't there something in it, girls? Don't you almost force a man to lie to you in self defense? If one of the boys you know were to call you up honestly some Saturday morning and tell you he wanted to play golf with the boys that afternoon, would you believe him? And if you did believe him, would you be generous enough to allow for the fact that human nature is often sudden and notional and that a man who likes you and likes being with you, may find himself suddenly possessed by a desire to do anything but be with you?

I know a woman who has made a success of her marriage largely because she has a warm tolerance of other folks and their moods. When Claire married Greg every one looked unhappy and pulled a long face. Greg was a noted philanderer. He was jealous, selfish, exacting, moody—and charming withal. Women liked him and men found him the best of pals when he was in the right mood. And when he wasn't—they could give him a wide berth. But his wife? She'd have to put up with him all the time. She'd have to change her plans on a moment's notice. She'd be compelled to endure his changes of mood, his lack of consideration, his philandering, his exacting. No one knew how it could be done.

But Claire has done it. When Greg phoned home at 7 after she'd prepared a wonderful dinner and said he was going to stay at the club and play billiards with the boys, Claire didn't wonder if he was going to take out "a blonde"—at least not audibly. She just said sweetly that she hoped he would have a fine evening.

After Greg had done about a dozen brutally selfish things and Claire had accepted them all—not meekly—but calmly, one night he came home bursting with delight in himself because he had theater tickets. Claire said never a word until dinner was over and it was too late for Greg to get another companion. Then she announced calmly: "I've a new book. I'm just in the mood to stay home and read it." She didn't argue. She made no attempt to defend herself. But she stuck to her point. Greg raved, and Claire merely remarked that she believed in the freedom of the individual. Greg didn't speak to Claire for three days after that. But when he did calm down, she was as amicable as if nothing had happened. Similar incidents occurred four or five times. And now Greg has changed. Claire never doubted him. She never told him he was pulling "old stuff." But she pulled a little new stuff of her own.
