

"Store New Corn" J. W. Shorthill's Advice to Farmer

Feeding of Stock Urged As
Means to Help Dispose of Surplus and Prevent Glutting of Market.

Three things must be done to prevent glutting of the corn market and to help dispose of the surplus crop in Nebraska, according to J. W. Shorthill, secretary and treasurer of the Nebraska Farmers Live Stock association.

They are a decrease of all transportation rates; decreased rates of interest at all banks and a prevention move against allowing the present corn crop to get on the market until the already heavy surplus has been disposed of.

"Decreased freight rates would mean a greater movement of corn and would boost the corn prices," Mr. Shorthill said. "The present freight rates are almost prohibitive."

Foolish to Sell New Crop.
"Decreased interest rates would allow more farmers to borrow money. With this money they could buy cattle and hogs and feed their surplus corn through the winter and sell their fat stock in the spring, particularly hogs, at a good price."

"It is foolish to place the new crop of corn on the market while there is so much left of last year's crop. Everything possible should be done to prevent the new corn being moved. It should be stored away and kept until there is an actual demand for it."

"A campaign to encourage consumption of corn products as food will not help. There would be a tendency to make too much corn into food which would mean a loss in corn to be fed to stock. The percentage of corn consumed by the public is so small that, no matter how much they tried they could not decrease the corn surplus to any noticeable degree. The most advantageous way out of the predicament is to feed the corn to stock through the winter."

Feeding on Increase.
"Statistics show that 8 per cent more hogs are being fed in Nebraska than a year ago. There will be an increase in the near future in this percentage. Many farmers will feed cattle and spring pigs."

"Kansas has already made an increase of 25 per cent on feeders," Mr. Shorthill declared that with these three agencies to help, the present corn surplus problem would, in good time, solve itself.

That three years ago these engineers produced the Dual Valve engine and made the strongest possible claims as to the power, flexibility and economy of that engine;
