Man Tried for Holdup Said to Be Escaped Convict

John Anderson Made Daring Escape From Washington State Reformatory, Authorities Say.

John Anderson, who was found guilty of assault and battery in District Judge Troup's court after being tried on a charge of attempting to rob the grocery store of J. J. Spellman, 1102 North Seventeenth street, the night of August 13, is an escaped convict and wanted at the Washington state reformatory, according to word received from authorities Friday afternoon.

A message received by Assistant County Attorney Yeager said Anderson was sentenced at Spokane in February, 1920, after being convicted of assault with intent to murder.

He was serving a sentence of from 10 to 20 years and had served only a small portion of the term when he staged a daring escape.

Taking the guards by surprise, according to information received here, he went over a high wall surrounding the reformatory and, with all the guards firing at him with sawed-off shotguns and rifles, made his escape. The escape was some time last spring.

Anderson had been imprisoned under the name of Gordon Osborne. When Yeager confronted Anderson in his cell this afternoon he admitted that he had been convicted in Washington, but said he was paroled later.

When Yeager told him of the information he had received from Washington state officials, Anderson finally confessed, according to Yeager, that he was the man wanted. Washington officials had been combing the country several months for Anderson. He is being held in the county jail pending further word from authorities.

Identified by Storekeeper.

During the recent trial it was testified that Anderson and a pal went into the Spellman store and asked for "nickel's" worth of doughnuts." As Spellman went to the rear of the store to fill the order, he looked around because he was suspicious of the men. He said one of the pair drew a gun. Spellman drew his revolver and fired four or five times. One of the men grappled with him and after a short struggle ran out the door. Spellman said he was sure a shot struck one of the men and identified Anderson as one of his assailants.

Anderson was found sometime later in the University hospital with a bullet wound in his right arm.

Premier May Attend Conference

Hint That Lloyd George May Come to Disarmament Meet Despite Recent Letter to Government.

Cabinet Urges Visit

By The Associated Press.

London, Oct. 7.—A hint that Premier Lloyd George may yet be able to attend the conference on the limitation of armaments and far-astern questions in Washington was made in a semi-official statement to the press tonight. It was pointed out that the present position is that the British premier has notified the American government of his inability to attend, but that this is not necessarily his last word.

It is generally regarded that the American government is anxious for him to attend and it is understood that considerable influence is being brought to bear upon him to induce a reconsideration of his decision.

The pressure was particularly marked during Mr. Lloyd George's stay at Gairloch and it is understood that he found strong support at today's cabinet meeting from his ministerial colleagues. It was stated that it is extremely probable that the premier will be prevailed upon to go to Washington if developments in other directions make it at all possible. At the moment, however, his refusal holds good, and in the meantime the British delegates have not completed. It is understood that they will not be appointed until next week at the earliest.

Mr. Lloyd George left this evening for Chequers Court, his country home, and is expected to return to London, Sunday. The only information reaching Washington today is that the premier's cabinet meeting was the appointment of the government's delegates to the conference with Irish leaders here next Tuesday, although it was understood the discussion embraced both the Irish and Washington conference.

Doctor Dissatisfied With Result of Tests In Meyer Murder Case

Twin Falls, Idaho, Oct. 7.—The positive reaction shown by the Widal test in the case of Edward F. Meyer did not satisfy the physician. Meyer died of typhoid fever, according to Dr. Hal Bieler, pathological expert, testifying for the state in the trial of Lydia Meyer Southard, for murder. Dr. Bieler declared that the test taken from the body was not that of a typhoid or paratyphoid as the cause of death.

An enormous audience still fills the court house at each session of the case, women and young girls predominating.

The story of his visit to the Twin Falls cemetery in April and the exhumation of the remains of Meyer was told by Dr. Bieler. The disposition of the three sets of specimens taken from the body was set forth in detail. Cross-examination failed to alter the story of the witness.

Janitor Held In Connection With $2,000 Bank Theft

Negro in Jail for Investigation Following Alliance Robbery; Money Found in Dry Goods Box.

Alliance, Neb., Oct. 7.—(Special Telegram.)—Jimmie Shores, negro janitor, is held in the county jail for investigation in connection with the theft of $2,000 in silver from the First National bank of Alliance, where he was employed.

The money, which was in four sacks containing $500 each and placed in two large sacks, was recovered two days after the theft by three small boys who found it in a discarded dry goods box at the rear of the hallway in the second story of the bank building.

The money had been received a few hours before the theft from Omaha and the assistant cashier had overlooked placing it in the vault. The sacks were placed on the floor behind an adding machine and at the closing hour it was forgotten. Shores performed his usual duties as janitor that night and in the morning the money was missing.

A representative detective agency in Denver investigated the case. Suspicion was directed against Shores because he was the only person, besides the bank attaches, who possessed a key to the building.

A few hours before the money was discovered by the three boys, bank officials in the hallway in which the money was later found.

On the floor where the assistant cashier had placed the money sacks several empty bags were found, which evidently had been placed on the floor by the thief to prevent the sacks from being discovered by bank officials.

Shores had been employed as janitor at the bank for about four years and had performed similar duties at the Alliance National bank for seven years. Several years ago, while at work alone at night, he reported finding several thousands dollars in currency which had been left on a counter.

Another local negro, Tom Murphy, is under arrest in Denver in connection with the theft under circumstances which aroused the suspicions of the officers. Shores does not know of the theft.

Mr. Meeker appeared yesterday afternoon as his own counsel and also appeared as a witness in behalf of his action. He presented two wit-

San Francisco, Oct. 7.—James McGill was married here last night to Medi Frost of Sacramento and immediately thereafter was taken to San Quentin prison to serve a life term for murder of John D. Koplos, Marysville merchant. Two deputy sheriffs were witnesses.

Earlier in the day a license to wed had been refused the couple at Marysville, and Superior Judge James M. Trout, who performed the ceremony in San Francisco, later said he was not aware McGill was under life sentence.

Doubt was expressed by Judge Trout whether the ceremony was legal, as the privilege of marriage, he said, probably would come under the list of civil rights of which a felon is deprived.

Hundreds See Farmer Cremated

Auto Crashes Into Train Near Johnson—Passengers Unable to Aid Victim.

Auburn, Neb., Oct. 7.—(Special Telegram.)—B. F. Kope, farmer living between Brock and Johnson, was cremated one-half mile east of Johnson at 3:30 this afternoon while hundreds of passengers on the Holdrege-Nebraska City Burlington train looked on, powerless to give him assistance.

Mr. Kope was driving to Johnson to get his daughter, who is a school teacher in that city. It was necessary for him to cross the Burlington right-of-way to enter the city. As he approached the crossing the train was passing.

The engine and one coach had crossed the road when Kope reached the track. His automobile crashed in between two of the following cars.

The gasoline tank of the car was punctured and the machine was aflame before the train could be stopped and backed up. Trainmen endeavored to reach the body of the man, but the intense flames drove them back.

Passengers on the train who were eye witnesses to the accident were unable to tell how it occurred. The opinion was that the brakes on his automobile failed to hold and stop the car.

Girl Launches $5,000 Heart Balm Suit Prior to Wedding Date Set

Ray C. Arthur, 807 Underwood avenue, clerk for the Western Union Telegraph company, was sued yesterday afternoon for $5,000 in a breach of promise suit brought by Miss Genevieve Gill of Minneapolis, Minn.

The petition states that although the spring has not come as yet, Mr. Arthur has somewhat cooled in his ardor. She alleges that plenty of time has elapsed and if he intended making good on his promise he would have done so long ago.

Giants Cop Third One Of Series

National Sluggers Come From Behind and Snow Yanks Under to Score of 13 to 5.

Eight Runs In Seventh

By C. A. LOVETT.

Chicago Tribune-Omaha, Nov. Leased Wire.

New York, Oct. 7.—World series scoring and income records went by the board today when the jaded Giants came suddenly to life, battered a quartet of Yank hurlers into a pulp and brought the game count to two and one by slugging out a 13 to 5 victory.

The American League champions in defeat, however, retained the consolation that they had held the National leaguers away from the plate for 20 innings and 'ere the Giants crashed into the run column today, had established a four-run lead and driven big Fred Toney to cover.

Jess Barnes stepped into the breach, controlling Toney's inexcusable in the third inning and pitching one of the finest six and two-thirds inning turns of his career, stifled the Yankee attack and led his team mates in a battling jamboree with which the Giants came from behind and tied the score in the same inning in which the host of Huggins' has taken their seemingly 'size advantage.

World Series Record.

More than that, Barnes, with his second-line single, precipitated the seventh inning oray in which the Giants mingled eight hits for a total of 12 bases, with two bases on balls and a sacrifice fly. This produced a total of eight runs, a new world series scoring record for a single inning, and of course put the game beyond all hope of recall. The previous record number of runs for one inning was set by the famous old Athletics, when they tallied seven in one stanza of the final game of the 1911 post-season event, which match they won by 13 to 2.

The veteran, Bob Shawkey, was the first victim of the Giant assault and Jack Quinn, making his debut world series appearance in a dozen years' of pitching in the major and class AA leagues, succeeded him and faded nobly until he came to the fatal seventh.

Rip Collins replaced Quinn after four runs had been hit in this frame and remained until three singles, a long fly, a walk and a triple had amassed four runs.

Call on Recruit.

Recruit Tom Rogers, who once had a tryout with the St. Louis Americans and since has done some effective pitching in the International league, then was called upon. Giants had no such formidable pitcher in the third game. Toney was counted upon to turn in a fair game and, in event he faltered, McGraw was much better fixed in the matter of twirling reserves than the shrewd Huggins.

The Giant run-getting organization, therefore, was figured to display its prowess today or never in this series. And it more than lived up to expectations. Had the Giants dropped this game, the series might very well have been over in five games. Now it cannot but go to six games and from present indications, may go to eight or even nine.

Whereas, in the first two games of the series all of the secret Giants' hits had been credited to Frisch and Rawlings, every one of the Giant regulars broke into the hit column today except the team's chief home run swatter, George Kelly, George Burns and Frank Snyder were in the van of the assaulting forces with four sacks apiece, Burns having pitched a double and triple in his collection.

Meusel Garners Three.

And Emil Meusel was close behind with three hits, including a double. Ross Young, who was twice passed before he soaked out a double and a triple in the seventh, thereby setting a world series mark for swatmen's hits to shoot at in years to come, hit third mightily to the downfall of the Yankee.

Strange as it may seem, the Giants' first two runs of the series, in the 21st inning thereof, were not and closed the inning without more damage being done, but the Giants well upon him for two singles and a double in their last time at bat.

The reincarnation of the Giant hitters, upon whose work in the league campaign so many world series forecasts were predicted, awoke local fandom from a lethargy into which it had fallen in rather natural consequence of the seeming outclassing of the McGraw team by the title winners of the Johnson circuit.

It was the box work alone that tilted the Yanks today. Under the terrific bombardment from Giant bigguns, while hits to the right, volleyed, hit to the left of them, volleys, and thunders, the Yankee defense field, impregnable in the first two battles, held firm and handled cleanly and with dispatch everything it could reach.

Giants Better Fixed.

The betting fraternity had expected it to be the Gants' day, for with Mays and Hoyt out of the way, the hit hit. They were forced in by Shawkey in a flight of wildness in the third round, in which he issued three passes to successive batters after he had been miked for two singles, the first by Barnes, who led off in this inning. Burns tied before Bancroft pushed Barnes down to second with a rightfield single, and Shawkey, in great pains to avoid grooving one, walked Frisch and Young, the second pass forcing in Barnes, and then, after getting a 3 and 2 count on Kelly, walked him.
