SLEEPY-TIME TALES

CHAPTER XIX

The Carpetbug.

Mr. P. Bug's statement amazed Mrs. Ladybug. He said he had nev-er been in Colorado. More than that, he declared he didn't even know where the place was. Now, Peppery Polly Tumblebee ad told Mrs. Ladybug that Mr. P.

Bug was no stranger in Pleasant Val-ley. But Mrs. Ladybug had not be-lieved what she said. Even hearing Mr. Bug's own words, Mrs. Ladybug couldn't help doubting them.

"Can it be true—" she asked him—
"can it be true that you've never been off this farm?"

Mr. Bug quite plainly wished that

"It can be-it is true," he replied

At last Mrs. Ladybug had to be lieve what she heard.

"Then you're a fraud!" she cried.

"You're a cheat! For I read on your carpetbag, when we met in the or-chard, 'P. Bug, Colorado.'"

"Oh!" said Mr. Bug with a smile.
"Oh! So that's where you got your odd question. I wondered how you happened to make such a mistake."
"A perfectly natural mistake, I'm sure!" Mrs. Ladybug exclaimed in-dignantly.
