

Couple Rewed After 17 Years' Estrangement

Daughter, About to Become Bride and Leave Mother, Advises Divorced Father To Come.

An estrangement of 17 years was ended yesterday and a former husband and wife reconciled through the efforts of a daughter, when Mrs. Jeanette Brown, Council Bluffs, and Elmer Roach, Peoria, Ill., were remarried at the home of the Rev. Charles W. Savidge, 2228 Maple street, by the "marrying parson."

The groom was a printer employed by Omaha newspapers in 1895 and was well known here as "Johnnie" Roach.

In 1904 Roach and his wife were divorced. She took her small daughter and went to Council Bluffs to live. He went to Peoria.

After living in Council Bluffs for some time, the divorced wife married George H. Brown, Council Bluffs business man, who died several years ago. Through all the years of separation Roach wrote his daughter, recently Mr. Roach received a letter from his daughter saying that she was going to be married and move to Portland, Ore., with her husband.

In the letter she said, "father, mother is the most wonderful woman in the world. It is a shame for me to leave her all alone now because she has been so good to me. Why don't you come here and get her?"

Roach heeded the advice of his daughter and came to Council Bluffs, where the reconciliation took place yesterday they were granted a license to wed in Omaha and left for Portland, all unknown to their children. The bride and groom hope to beat them there and start life anew with their children.

Nebraska Beet Fields Are Shame to State, Welfare Head Says

Lincoln, Oct. 10.—(Special).—Nebraska's shame is the beet fields in the western part of the state, where children work from sunrise to sunset and get little or no education, according to Miss Emily Hornberger, field secretary for the state department of public welfare.

Miss Hornberger has just returned from a trip to that section and declares she finds that not one-fourth of the children engaged in the beet field industry are going to school.

According to results of her investigation, children are put to work by their parents at 7 years of age and from then on until they grow to manhood and womanhood education plays little or no part in their life.

The conditions in that section are peculiar and especially hard to handle because many of the children have foreign-born parents who travel from one place to another after work. This, Miss Hornberger says, makes it difficult to clamp the enforced school attendance law upon them.

Two Oil Lease Salesmen Without Permits Arrested

Failure to obtain a permit from the state bureau of securities to sell oil leases in Nebraska caused the arrest yesterday of Charles E. Miller and H. C. Flesher, Sanford hotel.

Both men were bound over to district court on $150 bonds. Their arrest was made following the filing of a complaint by the county attorney after they had gone to his office to find out if they were in the clear.

They told police they had sold $10,000 worth of five-acre oil leases on land asserted to be in Guadalupe county, Texas, in Omaha during the last two months.

Their system was to work through the nurses' registry. "There's no trying to sell leases to bookkeepers or clerks," Flesher declared. "The nurses are the people that have the money."

The pair told detectives they work for the J. W. Russell Oil company, with headquarters at Kansas City. W. Russell, they say, is reputed to be several times a millionaire.

"There's nothing wrong with our business," they protested when arrested. "We have a legitimate company and there is nothing crooked about it. We put over a $2,500,000 company in 1919 and we couldn't do it now. People aren't buying like they used to."

Persons to whom Flesher and Miller are asserted to have sold leases without a permit, whose names appear on the complaint filed by the county attorney, follow: Leslie R. Miller, 4312 Pacific street; Hedwig Stoppa, 916 South Thirty-second street; Frances Lynch, 4755 South Eighteenth street; Florence Watson, Killeve Westberg and Maymie McDermott, 2420 Harvey street; Florence Barry, 1327 South Nineteenth street; Catharine Janulewicz, 4755 South Eighteenth street; Frances Bier, 2520 Pinkney street; G. Mother Rescues 2 Babies From Burning Home

Woman Fights Way Through Smoke to Crib When Fire Apparatus Stalls on Steep Hill.

Still sleeping in their beds on the second floor of their home, two babies, 8 months and 2 years old, respectively, were rescued from flames which completely razed the three-story house, by their mother, Mrs. J. Clara, Madison Park, Council Bluffs, at 8 o'clock yesterday.

Madison Park is just off Graham avenue at the top of the bluff. Fire fighting apparatus could not reach the home because of the steep grade, even the light chemical truck stalling on the hill.

The frantic mother rushed into the smoke-filled house and rescued her two babies. Neighbors were able to save but a few pieces of furniture. Mrs. Clara estimated her loss at $8,000. Origin of the fire is laid to defective wiring.

Boy Dies While Parents Are Held On Booze Charge

Just a few moments before his parents reached his bedside, after being released on $1,000 bond each in Council Bluffs on rum running charges, little Dale Ashburn, 12, died Sunday at the home of his grandmother, Mrs. C. B. Ashburn, 2634 Washington street, Omaha.

A week ago last Friday Dale fell from a tree in his yard and hurt his foot on some stubble. The injury was considered unimportant until last Saturday, when the pain became intense and a physician was summoned.

Tetanic poisoning, often the cause of lockjaw, was the diagnosis made, and the little fellow was confined to bed in his grandmother's home. Halted in Bluffs.

The parents in Chicago, were notified and began the long drive by automobile to their son's bedside. All was well until they started the drive through Council Bluffs. There their car was halted by sheriff's deputies and 60 gallons of alcohol in the tonneau uncovered, according to Sheriff W. A. Groneweg.

Ashburn and his bride explained to the sheriff their son's illness and were released at once on $1,000 bond each. But the arrest had caused just enough delay, and when they reached the grandmother's home, little Dale was dead.

Funeral services for the boy will be held at the grandmother's home this afternoon at 2. The boy and his parents lived next door at 2632 Washington street. Dr. R. L. Wheeler will officiate. Burial will be in Laurel Hill cemetery.

Women Are Held. Another asserted booze car was nabbed also by Sheriff Groneweg in Council Bluffs Sunday. Twenty gallons of alcohol was found in this car, whose occupants were C. J. Rickenbaugh, Twenty-ninth avenue and Third street; his sister, Kate Kickenbaugh, and Grace Underwood, 234 West Broadway, and Frank Ellis, 919 Avenue C, all of Council Bluffs.

They were nabbed at the end of the paving near the Iowa School for the Deaf following a pistol battle with Deputy Sheriffs Adolphson, Gillspay and Sloan.

During the firing one of the women kept screaming and officers thought for a time she was wounded, but none of the quartet was harmed they later learned.

The Underwood woman was released early yesterday and the other three held on federal charges filed by Sheriff Agent Summer Knox. State bonds for the men were set at $1,000 each, and for the women at $500. Federal bonds will be set at a hearing before United States Commissioner Byers.

The elder LaViolette left his cane at the shrine, walking away without limping, he said. Though not completely cured, the intense pain of the injury is gone, he declared. Mr. LaViolette suffered the injury three years ago when he fell from a porch. He has used crutches or a cane since.
