Members of Unemployment Conference Declare Readjustment of Prices and Wages Vital.

Production Big Problem

By ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, Oct. 13. — That neither commodity prices nor wage we es can be maintained above the patural economic level is asserted in a statement issued by the employer members of President Harding's conference on unemployment, upon the final adjournment of the conference. They declare that prices and wages rose substantially hand in hand during the war, but that since that time prices have declined more rapidly

The employers maintain that their principal difficulty is a high and un-balanced cost of production which is keeping down the buying power of consumers. The condition cannot be bettered, it is declared, "until each of us recognizes it as a fact and does his part, individually and collectively, to restore a free exchange of commodities and services upon such terms that we may absorb each other's products."
