Alleged Auto Thief Flees 10 Blocks in Fusillade of Bullets—Two Die in Dynamite Blast.

New York, Oct. 19.—Fleeing before a fusillade of revolvers of two detectives Norman W. Garrett, 31, alleged "lone wolf" auto thief, was captured yesterday afternoon after a chase of 10 blocks.

Detectives who made the capture declare that Garrett's arrest will explain the theft of a score of New York autos. He worked without accomplices, they said. Garrett is charged with grand larceny. He will be arraigned tomorrow.

Garrett holds an M. D. degree from the University of Pennsylvania. In selling stolen cars, it is alleged, he posed as a physician, giving up his practice. When business men answered his advertisements calling in person and sold his cars on the spot, it is charged, with the aid of faked bills of sale.

Dynamite Kills Two. Puxico, Mo., Oct. 19.—Two men were killed and a third seriously injured eight miles south of here yesterday morning while working on a bridge span over a large ditch when 18 sticks of dynamite which were in a basket nearby exploded.

Blinded by "Moonshine." Portland, Ore., Oct. 19.—H. Thurber bought "moonshine" liquor, drank it and went blind, according to allegations he made in a suit filed in circuit court here for $3,000 against George Yrotka, the man whom he alleges sold him the liquor. There was one gallon and one pint of the liquor, Thurber said. Shortly after he began drinking it, the optic nerve became partly paralyzed, growing rapidly worse until his sight was 10 per cent of what it should have been, the complaint charges, caused by "deleterious and poisonous" substances in the liquor.

Prisoner Kills Self. Chicago, Oct. 19.—Faced with paralysis as a result of wounds received in a gang feud October 11, Charles Reiser, alleged safe blower, yesterday committed suicide at the hospital where he was taken following his injury.

Reiser's body was riddled with bullets in the feud and he was told later that although he would live he would be paralyzed. He refused to name his assailants. His wife visited him daily at the hospital and it is believed she took him the gun with which he ended his life.

Briand Demands Full Support of Deputies At Arms Conference

Paris, Oct. 19.—(By The Associated Press.)—Premier Briand went before the chamber of deputies, which resumed sessions yesterday, and made it clear that his policy must have the support of the deputies if he was to represent France at the Washington conference. If France desired a policy of force, he said, representatives of the country must say so. He would, however, decline to associate himself with such a policy.

The chamber discussed four of the 16 interpellations on the government's foreign policy. Premier Briand showed himself ready to argue points made by the speakers, rising frequently to contradict or correct statements made.

During an exchange, Andre Tardieu charged M. Briand with giving instructions to the commission on reparations when the German debt was being calculated. The premier declared this to be false.

Boland Expresses Hope For Irish Settlement. Washington, Oct. 19.—Hope that final peace between Ireland and England will result from present negotiations was expressed by H. J. Boland, who arrived yesterday as the representative of the republic of Ireland.

"Ireland is convinced," he said, "that the only way in which it can hold its hard-won liberties is to be ever prepared to defend them against aggression and to this end we call on our friends in America to throw the great strength of their moral influence into the scales on the side of Ireland's plenipotentiaries, so that the centuries-old struggle between the two countries may be happily ended."

"Wealth is a flop," the philosopher said, "In the language philosophers use, A man who can think would far sooner be dead Than a prey to the 'Billionaire Blues'."

"The dough is the hoakum," the poet declared, "No fortune is ever secure. When our fortune is ever spared I shall always be happy and poor."

"Money," the socialist yelled, "is but dress. And the nations of earth have a socialist boss There won't be a cent in the world. We only will toil for the joy of the work; We'll banish all trouble and wrong; No man shall be driven, and no one shall shrink And life will be one grand sweet song."

The philosopher, poet and socialist said Their words—we have quoted a few— For money—detested and valueless good— To an editor man that they knew. The things that they said they would never retract; They came from their hearts—blazing hot; Yet nevertheless it's a curious fact That they kicked at the price that they got!

SLEEPY-TIME TALES

THE TALE OF MRS. LADYBUG

CHAPTER XVII. A Brave Gentleman.

Mrs. Ladybug didn't know that the frog she saw was a very timid fellow. His name was Mr. Cricket Frog. He liked to sit on a lily pad and sing, and his singing sounded a good deal like the music that Chirpy Cricket made. In fact, that was the reason for his odd name.

Mr. Cricket Frog had a trick not unlike the one that Mrs. Ladybug herself played upon him. Whenever water and float. She couldn't see him climb out upon the lily pad again and gaze at her.

Now the moment Mrs. Ladybug looked at the frog the second time he took fright again. Once more he sprang from his seat. Once more he floated like a chip upon the surface of the pond. Once more he crawled back to his seat after he had made up his mind that the danger had passed.

So they played dead for a long time—both Mrs. Ladybug and Mr. Cricket Frog. And it hadn't at last made up his mind that she was afraid of him, they might still be trying to fool each other.

"ardon me, madam," Mr. Cricket Frog called to Mrs. Ladybug. "I see you're a bit timid. I assure you I shall not harm you."

At that Mrs. Ladybug opened her eyes and looked at him. Slowly she thrust her feet out from under her body. And then she tried her wings. They were as good as ever. Her fall had not injured them.

"You gave me a terrible fright," Mrs. Ladybug told him. "Mr. Cricket Frog was very bold now."

"Why were you afraid of me?" he asked her. "Do I look fierce?" he inquired with a hopeful smile, as if he hoped that he did, but scarcely dared think so.

"I'm afraid of all frogs," Mrs. Ladybug explained. "Now, there's Ferdinand Frog."

"A rascal," Mr. Cricket Frog cried. "But, madam, I'm not in the least like him. I wouldn't hurt you. In fact, I'd protect you."

His words pleased Mrs. Ladybug. She said that thereafter she would always feel safe, with him in the neighborhood.

Mr. Cricket Frog bowed gallantly, with his hand on his heart. And Mrs. Ladybug went away without guessing that he had himself played dead because he had been in terror of her.

"What a brave gentleman he is," Mrs. Ladybug murmured. (Copyright, 1921, by Bell Syndicate, Inc.)
